Bieber sued over Calfa building

The Village of Wheeling has filed suit against William Bieber, former village building director, and two businessmen for allegedly conspiring to violate village ordinances.

The suit charges Bieber and businessmen Richard Calfa and George Harhen with conspiring to violate village ordinances during construction of an office building at 1111 W. Dundee Rd. in 1971. The village is seeking $50,000 in damages. Calfa, owner of the building, and Harhen are former partners.

Village Atty. John Burke said the suit, filed in Circuit Court, basically contends that the three men "knew the building going up was not in conformity with village ordinances."

Bieber was indicted in 1974 on federal charges of extortion and conspiracy stemming from the shake-down of Wheeling developers. He pleaded guilty to the charges and was sentenced to a one-year prison term.

THE BUILDING has been cited for violation of the village fire ordinance which prohibits frame buildings. Calfa also used the basement for office space, although plans filed with the village have no provisions for a finished basement.

Three village inspectors recently testified the building plans differed from those used to construct the building. They said they informed Bieber of the discrepancy, but he reportedly did nothing about it.

The village ordered Calfa to vacate basement offices because plans to finish the basement for office use were never approved. Calfa later filed suit against the village to overturn the vacation order. The basement offices are occupied by Roper Co.

Earlier this week, the village zoning board granted Calfa's request for a variance from village fire limits.

Office complex builder hits new village delay

Developers of a proposed office-warehouse complex Thursday night said they have been "led down the garden path" by Wheeling officials who again delayed action on the project.

Ronald Benrick, owner of the Lexington Development Co., Schaumburg, said he thought his company was "entitled to some action at this meeting."

"We've complied with every request both written and oral. I think we're entitled to a ruling," he said.

COMMISSION MEMBERS said they wanted to delay action on the complex request until they met with Village Atty. John Burke. In a letter to the commission, Burke said he believes the industrial use requested by the developer contradicts the village's comprehensive plan as originally drafted and amended. He recommended that Lexington "be advised and requested to conform its plans to the official plan."

Lexington is seeking to purchase eight-acres west of the village hall for development of the complex. The development would include 28 dock bays to accommodate semi-trailer trucks.

Burke said the original village master plan designated the area for park and recreational use. The village board is now seeking to have the site rezoned in an effort to block industrial development there.

JAMES K. STUCKO, attorney for Lexington Development Co., said the developer was not aware the current industrial zoning is not in accordance with the village's proposed comprehensive plan now being developed.

"We felt we weren't give all the facts. We're three months and a lot of money down the lane and we're now told the zoning doesn't apply," he said.

Plan Commission chairman Anthony Altieri said Stucko was notified of the conflict between the zoning and comprehensive plan at the preliminary hearing on the project.

The commission will discuss the office-warehouse complex at its Nov. 20 meeting at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

Walker takes case to people

'Override means tax increase'

by STEVE BROWN

Gov. Daniel Walker warned again Thursday that if the state Senate votes to override his veto of $116 million in education funds, an increase in taxes is inevitable.

Walker took to the voters his fight to have the vetoes sustained during a five-minute television address telecast throughout the state.

The governor outlined what has become the familiar message that he has increased state funding of education more than $500 million in the past three years and that schools will get $100 million more this year than last even if the vetoes are sustained.

He noted the financial picture in the state is not any better now than it was five months ago when he called for a 6 per cent across-the-board state spending cut. He noted unemployment has increased to more than 10 per cent in Illinois.

HE ALSO NOTED the state has increased its share of education funding from 37 per cent to 48 per cent in the past few years.

Despite the increased funding, Walker said some people are still demanding more.

"I believe with all my heart that the people of this state are spending enough for education and we should not ask the taxpayers to pay more,

especially when it means a tax increase."

Walker said the issue is not favoring increased aid to education, but if the Illinois General Assembly should be allowed to overspend and force a tax hike.

The governor also questioned if the increased state spending has brought about an increase in the quality of education.

"DOES ANYBODY really believe the quality of education has increased as much as the burden on the taxpayers; does anybody really believe that school administrators cannot eliminate waste and put those dollars into the classroom," Walker said.

"If you are against higher taxes, then say no to the override," Walker added.

The speech was part of a stepped up media blitz by Walker. Besides Thursday's speech, which was carried by WMAQ-TV, WLS-TV, WGN-TV and a number of Downstate stations, Walker appeared on several radio talk shows.

The governor made no mention of the compromise school funding proposal suggested Wednesday by a group of eight state senators. They have called for $30 million in funds for schools and a change in the school aid funding formula.

The lawmakers had asked Walker to call a special session of the legislature next week to consider the proposal. The governor has indicated he will take the request under advisement.

Feminists urge woman for top court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House said Thursday President Ford will try to nominate the "best qualified person" to succeed Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas — and feminists, with an ally in Betty Ford, urged him to make that person a woman.

At least one woman — Carla Hills, the secretary of housing and urban development — seemed likely to be among the top candidates. And the names of at least half a dozen others cropped up in Washington speculation over who might become the first female Supreme Court justice.

The First Lady told reporters she had a chat with the President and informed him of her wish that he select a female successor to Douglas, who retired suddenly Wednesday for reasons of health. Asked Ford's reaction, she smiled and said, "We'll see."

"There are so many woman judges who fill the bill," she said, and one of them could be "the best person for the job."

Ford, however, remained strictly noncommittal on the subject of potential nominees.

Other top possibilities appeared to be assistant Senate Republican leader

Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, Judge Arlin Adams of the U.S. 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia — both recommended along with Hills by Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott — and Attorney General Edward Levi.

But the retirement of Douglas for reasons of health Wednesday put Ford in the tricky political position of finding a nominee acceptable to both liberal and conservative politicians — or gamble with one side or the other. Either bloc could try to obstruct the nomination in the Senate and plunge

County doctors' accord ends strike

Resident doctors and interns at Cook County Hospital reached contract accord Thursday ending an 18-day strike at one of the nation's largest medical facilities. Doctors returned to work immediately after a 13-hour all-night negotiating session brought about the settlement between the House Staff Assn., representing 450 physicians and hospital officials. The settlement means a 6-8 per cent salary increase that will raise physicians' wages to between $12,000 and $17,000 a year.

Arlington funds study asked

Financial problems in New York City have prompted ex-Arlington Heights Village Pres. Ralph Clabour to call for the formation of a special "one shot-committee" to study Arlington Heights' long-term financial obligations. The former village official said the panel could be made of trustees, business leaders and interested citizens to probe "the long term commitments of Arlington Heights and the ability tax-wise to meet those commitments in the future."

Palatine gets museum

Palatine Bicentennial Committee officials said Thursday they expect to acquire title to a 103-year-old house for use as a historical museum. The Victorian-style house, 224 E. Palatine Rd., was purchased recently from the Palatine National Bank with a $10,000 down payment on the $48,000 purchase price.

Most county fees to increase soon

The cost of getting a marriage license isn't going to increase this year for Cook County couples.

But almost every other county service is going to cost more, including getting a copy of your marriage certificate after the wedding.

County Board members Thursday decided to spare the pocketbooks of lovers after County Clerk Stanley Kasper pointed out that the current $10 fee covers the actual cost of issuing the license.

When County Comr. John Stroger noted the fee hadn't been increased since 1963, Kasper said, "We don't want to discourage people from getting married."

Comr. Ronald Larson drew a round of applause and some laughter when he suggested that with the high divorce rate maybe the marriage licenses should have to be renewed every five years.

County board members, however, seemed ready to hike almost every other county fee Thursday, after an all-day hearing with testimony by various county department heads.

Comr. Jerome Huppert, head of the board's finance committee, said he hoped the increased fees could be drafted as ordinances within 10 days so that they could be instituted shortly after the county begins its new fiscal year on Dec. 1.

Among the free services which might cost more money are tax searches by the county treasurer's of-fee and reviewing ethics statements and financial disclosure forms that political office holders and candidates must file with the county clerk.

Increases proposed by county officials Thursday included:

- Doubling the cost of a Torrens certificate of title from the county recorder's office.
- Adding almost $60 to the current cost of $250 for getting a building permit to build a $30,000 house in an unincorporated area.
- Raising from $2 to $3 the cost of getting a birth certificate, marriage certificate, or death certificate.
- Doubling most other fees in the county clerk's office including such things as registering businesses under assumed names, tax redemption certificates, and certificates of magistracy.
- Hiking the cost of having the coroner investigate a death from $15 to $35 and increasing the cost of an inquest from approximately $30 to approximately $58.
- Charging attorneys for copies of forms they now obtain for free from the circuit court clerk's office.
- Doubling or increasing even more the fees the county environmental control department charges to inspect incinerators, pollution control devices, furnaces, and industrial plants.

The fee increases are aimed at helping a tight county budget situation with $164 million in anticipated revenues to balance against a budget that is approaching $185 million even without any raises for county employees.

Ford hunts Douglas successor

Ford into the nightmare of a confirmation battle in an election year.

The White House made clear he will move very carefully in making his choice.

"He will do it with great deliberation," Press Secretary Ron Nessen told reporters. "He considers such a nomination one of the most important decisions a President is called on to make."

Nessen said Douglas' resignation decision caught Ford by surprise and he apparently had no list of potential nominees. He said the President told him he "would be looking for the best qualified person he is able to find," and that qualification for the post — not politics — would be paramount.

But politics intruded immediately. In the House, Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., said she favored nomination of a woman but questioned whether "a non-elected President" should appoint any Supreme Court Justice. Rep. Don Riegle, D-Mich., also urged Douglas, seat to be left vacant until an elected president is sworn in in January, 1977.

The League of Women Voters, meanwhile, urged Ford to appoint a woman as the ninth justice. "Such an historic act would reaffirm your commitment to the principle that women are able to shoulder the burdens of high office," the League said in a telegram to Ford.

Other women considered possible nominees are New York lawyer Rita Hauser, 41, a Republican; U.S. District Judge Cornelia G. Kennedy of Detroit; Shirley M. Hufstедler, 50, a moderately liberal judge on the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals; former Rep. Martha Griffiths, 63, of Michigan; and Rep. Margaret Hechler, 44, R-Mass.

Meanwhile, Attorney General Levi sent a list of possible nominees to American Bar Association President Lawrence E. Walsh for the ABA's "views," a spokesman reported.

"I can't say how many names there were or the sexual makeup of the list," the spokesman said, adding Levi and the ABA could suggest other names but there was no agreement about the weight given to the ABA's views.

Whatever Ford decides and however the Senate acts on confirmation, the high court sorely needs a ninth justice and the newcomer will wield unusual influence.

Douglas' recuperation from a New Years' Eve stroke caused several important cases to be held over for this year in hopes he could join the decisions. The court has also promised to decide several major social issues including the constitutionality of the death penalty.

With Douglas gone, William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall comprise the once-dominant "liberal wing" of the court by themselves.

President Richard M. Nixon appointed four generally conservative panelists — Chief Justice Warren Burger, William Rehnquist, Harry Blackmun and Lewis Powell.

The remaining two justices, Byron R. White and Potter Stewart, are less predictable. But, along with a new politically moderate appointee, they could constitute a substantial "swing" vote, sometimes joining liberals Brennan and Marshall and sometimes the conservatives.

Douglas, meanwhile, returned briefly to the court Thursday to begin sorting out nearly 37 years of personal records and papers.

Appointed by Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1939, he served longer than any justice in history and was a consistent champion of individual liberties until the "incessant pain" of ill health forced his retirement Wednesday.

Rentschler guilty in bilking scheme

A federal court jury Thursday convicted William H. Rentschler, once former President Nixon's Illinois campaign manager and two other men of bilking investors out of $79,000 in a Malaysian timber venture. The three were found guilty on one count of conspiracy, eight counts of violating the U.S. Securities Act and eight counts of mail fraud. Rentschler, long active in Illinois GOP politics, was Illinois campaign manager for Nixon in 1968 and ran unsuccessfully in the 1970 primary campaign for the U.S. Senate. Convicted with Rentschler were Lloyd Hardesty and Calvin Buehrer.

Walker cited in Medicaid issue

A former employee of the Illinois Department of Public Aid Thursday claimed Illinois Gov. Daniel Walker injected politics into the administration and management of the state's welfare system and failed to act against waste and fraud totaling at least $350 million a year. John Goff, who in 1973 and 1974 was section chief for the department's Bureau of Quality Control, said on direct orders from Walker's top welfare official, James L. Trainer, specific materials that would have revealed the extent of fraud in the Medicaid system were withheld from federal auditors. He implicated Walker in the scheme, which Goff said was a "coverup."

Ford, GOP chiefs discuss energy veto

President Ford called Republican leaders to the White House Thursday night to help him decide whether to veto a Democratic compromise energy bill. Aides said Ford seemed ready to decide quickly. Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford earlier Thursday heard Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb's views on the measure approved by a House-Senate conference committee of the Democratically-controlled Congress.

National debt ceiling bill to Ford

Congress Thursday passed and sent to President Ford an $18 billion increase in the national debt ceiling, rejecting Republican attempts to attach Ford's ceiling on federal spending. The Senate quickly passed the bill by voice vote after the House finally passed it 213-198 over strong GOP opposition and political maneuvering by a large bloc of Democrats. The current ceiling expires at midnight Saturday.

Automakers report sales up 45 per cent

The four U.S. automakers reported Thursday that early November sales jumped 45 per cent over depressed year-ago levels in the biggest year-to-year gain in more than three years. American Motors jumped a full 100 per cent, General Motors 56.2 per cent, Chrysler Corp. 47 per cent and the Ford Motor Co. 22 per cent. It was the fourth consecutive 10-day period in which sales topped a 1974 period.

10 workers trapped in underground blast

An explosion tore through a 1 1/2-mile long tunnel below Mount Clemens in southeast Michigan late Thursday, killing one worker and burning and trapping 10 others in darkness, gas and knee-deep water 50 feet below ground. Rescuers described the scene underground as nightmarish. "I couldn't see a thing," one rescue worker said. "There was no air, no light. Just lots of smoke and water knee deep."

Al Fatah bomb rocks Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (UPI) — A time bomb apparently set by Arab guerrillas exploded with a might blast in busy Zion Square during the evening rush hour Thursday, killing or injuring more than three dozen persons in the worst such terrorist attack in four months.

Police Commander Arye Ivtzan said six persons were killed and 34 others wounded. The Israeli national radio said seven persons were killed.

The Al Fatah guerrilla organization claimed responsibility for the blast and said it killed 10 persons only 100 yards from the home of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

I was in the Navah Cafe two doors away when the bomb exploded. It was an ear-splitting blast. I heard a loud splitting blast. I heard a loud crash crash immediately after the explosion as hundreds of windows shattered and glass crashed to the ground. The customers in the cafe screamed, jumping from their chairs. Then no one moved for 10 seconds.

"Another one, another one," the woman behind the cake counter wailed.

An unshaven man with wavy black hair staggered in from the street. His face was twisted with pain and his knees doubled. He groaned, "I'm hit," and fell to the black and white tile floor, bleeding from his back and thighs.

Outside, a man lay dead in the gutter in front of the Migash Habourekha snack bar at the corner of Jaffa Road and Lunz Street. His body was blown in half at the abdomen.

The bomb, estimated to weigh 22 pounds, exploded one year to the day after Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization and the chief of Al Fatah, appeared before the U.N. General Assembly. Past guerrilla acts have been timed to coincide with important anniversaries.

Jerusalem police said several Arabs had been rounded up.

It marked the biggest explosion in Israel since a bomb went off in Zion Square July 4 only 20 yards from Thursday's blast, killing 15 persons and wounding 78 others in the worst civilian incident since the founding of Israel in 1948.

Interior Minister Camille Chamoun said Lebanese army commandos killed two gunmen at Beirut International Airport to foil a Palestinian guerrilla attack on an airliner. A Palestinian guerrilla spokesman denounced the charge as "totally false."

Total kidney failure wracks Franco

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Persistent internal bleeding and total kidney failure wracked Generalissimo Francisco Franco Thursday and a doctor said he was "sinking." His 30-man medical team fought with medicine and machine to save him.

The latest in a series of crises opened at 3:30 a.m. on the 27th day of the 82-year-old Spanish leader's dramatic struggle to live. His doctors said their medication had only abated the bleeding and listed Franco in "very grave" condition.

By evening, a medical bulletin said there were no new signs of the gastric hemorrhaging, but it did not make clear whether the previous bleeding had been finally stemmed.

A nonofficial consultant at La Paz hospital said Franco was in critical condition. "He is sinking. The bleeding is not as serious as previous bouts, but he is no longer strong enough to come out of it," he said.

Franco's kidney failure forced the full-time use of the mechanical substitute. Tubes were pushed down his windpipe to help him draw breath through blood accumulating in his mouth and congesting his lungs already threatened with pneumonia.

The 9 p.m. communique said Franco was under sedation, his breathing assisted by a respirator. He was said to have further wasted away to 80 pounds from the 110 when the avalanche of heart attacks and complications began. "The prognosis is still very grave," the bulletin said.

A defibrillator shocked his heart back to normal when it wavered, a pump-like device kept his blood pressure up and a respirator helped his belabored breathing.

With government officials gathering once again at La Paz hospital, Franco's 30-man medical team held off on a third stomach surgery because his system might not survive it.

The latest emergency began as Franco was resting following a similar bleeding relapse Wednesday.

Prime Minister Carlos Arias Navarro broke off talks with Moroccan and Mauritanian officials on the Spanish Sahara dispute at mid-morning to visit the hospital for a briefing on Franco's survival chances. Then he returned to work.

The archbishop of Zaragoza, Monsignor Pedro Cantero Cuadrado, was summoned to the capital. He is one of the three-man Regency Council that will run Spain between Franco's death and the inauguration of Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon as king.

Reduce truck, bus regulations: Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford, promising it would lower transportation costs, asked Congress Thursday to reduce government regulation of truck and bus lines.

The long-awaited bill, opposed by the trucking industry, would gradually relax the Interstate Commerce Commission's power to set rates and would allow new truck and bus lines to enter the market more easily.

Ford's proposal is "the ultimate in governmental irresponsibility," said William A. Bresnahan, president of the American Trucking Association.

"Such action would not only destroy essential stability in transportation but would completely disrupt the nation's entire marketing and distribution system," Bresnahan said.

Apparently anticipating opposition, White House Press secretary Ron Nessen said, "The President feels there may be opposition from special interest groups but he feels this gives an all-around better deal to consumers and improves competition in the industry."

Nessen said Ford urged Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Jr. "to work like the devil to get this passed," Nessen told reporters.

Ford earlier sent Congress legislation to ease government regulation in the railroad industry and the airline industry.

Under the bill, motor carriers also would be allowed to raise or lower rates within certain percentages without ICC approval — 7 per cent the first year, 12 per cent the second and 15 per cent the third year.

Panel votes to confirm Rumsfeld as defense chief

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Armed Services Committee voted unanimously Thursday to confirm Donald H. Rumsfeld as secretary of defense to succeed James R. Schlesinger, who was fired by President Ford earlier this month.

The committee had voted earlier to praise Schlesinger for his efforts to improve "the wisdom of our strategic forces and doctrine." Rumsfeld had promised to continue the policies of Schlesinger, whom Ford said he dropped because "I wanted my own team."

"I imagine the nomination will come to the floor next week," said the committee chairman, Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss.

Rumsfeld, 43, was chief of President Ford's staff before the shakeup. He served three terms as a congressman from Illinois, and headed the Office of Economic Opportunity and the Cost of Living Council in the Nixon administration. He served as ambassador to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization before he went to the White House.

Donald Rumsfeld

There were a number of questions, but no opposition from the 16 committee members. Conservatives had questioned Rumsfeld about his feelings on detente, to which he responded that his position was virtually identical to Schlesinger's.

"It's provocative to be belligerent, to be sure," Rumsfeld said. "But it is just as provocative to be weak."

In Thursday's session, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., told Rumsfeld that Kissinger admitted holding back strategic documents from Schlesinger.

"This is a most unfortunate situation," he said.

"You have the responsibility, especially when the secretary of state is present, to argue your position in person before the President," Jackson continued.

"There is no question," Rumsfeld replied, "the President is interested in learning the opinions of all his departments."

At the same time, he said, "I think the President does need a negotiator, and it's clear that the secretary of defense is not that individual."

During his congressional career, the Navy veteran served on the Joint Economic Committee and the House Space and Government Operations committees. He was never a member of any of the House military committees.

In addition to detente, the two days of questioning included the issues of detente, the possibly higher political ambitions of Rumsfeld and whether he could forcefully support the Pentagon's position in the Cabinet.

Schools remain open

Dist. 63 strike into third day

A teachers' strike in East Maine Dist. 63 was expected to enter its third day today despite continuing contract talks late Thursday.

Schools remained open in the district the first two days of the strike, although 88 per cent of the teachers were on picket lines.

Schools will remain open throughout the strike, district officials said.

Both sides say the strike could last through the weekend. Teachers plan to picket again today with little hope that a settlement would be reached Thursday night.

BOARD PRES. Arlene Nidetz said no issues had been resolved by 10:30 p.m. although talks were still in progress.

County School Supt. Richard Martwick was expected to attend negotiations again Thursday to try and mediate the differences. Martwick and John Leigh, a mediator from his office, also caucused with both sides Wednesday, but talks broke off after union negotiators discovered all the board members had left the bargaining table.

Union officials said 304 of the district's 346 teachers were on strike Thursday. They also reported the number of substitutes was down to 179 from 218 the first day.

School Supt. G. Allen Gogo said the union figures were "fairly accurate," although he was not "aware of many substitutes refusing to work."

Student attendance also was down Thursday, according to union figures which showed about 4,300 students in school. Normally about 5,100 of the district's 5,600 students are in class.

At a glance...

- Issues in East Maine Dist. 63 negotiations:
  - Salaries — teachers demand 9 per cent increase; the board is offering 5 per cent. Base pay this year is $8,734.
  - Staffing — teachers want seniority basis for staff cuts and transfers while the board says it is administrative prerogative.
  - Insurance — Teachers want greater contribution for single and family coverage.
  - Personal days — Teachers want three personal days off without approval from administration as currently is the case.

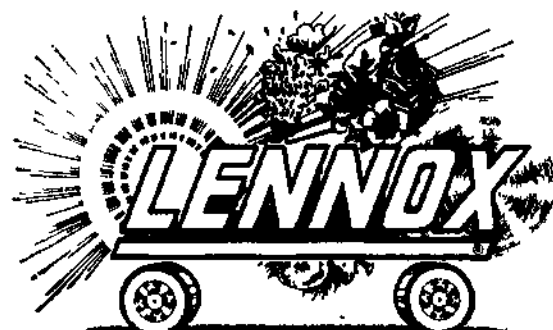

TEACHERS picketed outside the schools for the second day distributing leaflets to the parents explaining the teacher's positions.

Substitutes, staffing schools during the strike were taunted by regular teachers yelling "scab" when substitutes left school for the day.

Louann White, union vice president, said teachers are "angrier than they were before. They are more determined."

Harper bonds tax less than estimated

The first-year tax payment to pay off the first $6 million in Harper College $12 million referendum bonds will cost homeowners $3.80 per $10,000 assessed valuation next year, slightly less than anticipated by college officials.

As adopted, payments on the 12-year bond retirement schedule begin next spring for taxpayers, said William Mann, vice president for administrative services.

Prior to the Sept. 27 referendum, college officials estimated that the same homeowner would pay $4.42 the first year to retire the bond issue on a 20-year retirement schedule.

Mann said the total Harper tax bill in spring, 1976, will "be about $20 on a home assessed at $10,000." He said the college's original tax rate was about $22 on that same home.

THE 12-YEAR retirement schedule was suggested by bond consultant Paul D. Speer and Associates to take advantage of the best interest rates available. Mann told the board that interest on a 20-year retirement schedule would "be so high at the beginning of payments that it would, in fact, be a penalty to existing taxpayers."

The $6 million in bonds should be sold and delivered by Dec. 29 for use in building a $3.75 million physical education facility.

Another $2.1 million will be used to purchase the 117-acre site for Harper's second campus at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads in Arlington Heights.

Speer and Associates said the property can be paid for Dec. 30. The remaining $6 million of the bond issue probably will be sold in two, $3-million portions. It is anticipated the first $3 million portion will be sold in 1978.

Diabetes can affect eyes

I had a five-hour sugar tolerance test and was told I am a mild diabetic. I'm 58 and 5 feet 2. I've lost 14 pounds and have been able to maintain a weight of 120 for five months without a rigid diet.

I don't take insulin or pills and was told I need not return to the doctor unless I got into trouble. I'm mainly interested in how eyes are affected by diabetes and why.

When I go out to eat or travel, it's hard to stay on a sugar-free diet. If I have any reaction it is blurring and change in my vision, also occasional severe headaches about 5 a.m. and restless itching all over.

What specific symptoms mean trouble that indicates more tests, and how severe does diabetes have to be to cause blindness? I know of two cases of very sudden blindness where diabetes was the cause. Can mild adult diabetes cause this? Would one teaspoon of sugar on cereal in the morning be harmful? The substitutes leave a terrible taste, and I need the cereal for regularity I have found.

No doubt your doctor thought your findings were mild enough that he didn't have to give you a definite return date. That is good news. You should, however, have a check up every year, and the status of your diabetes, if you have diabetes at all, can be reevaluated. You may not need another glucose test for a general screening.

Depending on the type of response, one glucose tolerance test is often not sufficient basis to make a diagnosis of diabetes. If you want a better understanding of the glucose tolerance, send in 50 cents for The Health Letter number 3-11, Diabetes: Diagnosis, Prevention and Management. Just send your request to me in care of Paddock Publications, P. O. Box 1551 Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. You will have a better idea of what your doctor meant by a mild diabetic, and the problems of the glucose tolerance test.

The Health Letter will also give you tips on how to manage your problem. One of the most important steps is controlling or eliminating any excess body fat.

DIABETES AFFECTS the blood vessels in the back of the eye. They become diseased and may break, causing a hemorrhage into the eye. This will cloud the eye and not allow images to be transmitted through the normally clear material inside the eyeball causing sudden blindness.

Also diabetes may cause other retinal disease at the back of the eye where the image is projected to enable sight.

Diabetes increases the chances of developing cataracts. Although the method of cataract formation is not completely understood, the high blood sugar levels seem to be the important factor here.

IT IS HARD TO say if you will have eye damage with mild diabetes or not. You can have high cholesterol levels and fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries with mild diabetes. In general, though, the person who is controlled well without high blood sugar levels and is on a diet that helps to prevent vascular disease will do better than the person not so well managed.

Try one of the milk substitutes for babies who cannot tolerate milk. These canned milk substitutes on cereal give a slightly sweet taste and may solve your sugar problem for cereal.

Spray away centipedes

Dear Dorothy: Noticed your remedy for controlling ants and wonder if you know what to do about centipedes. I keep finding them on the basement walls. — Geri Spink

The "remove-from-the-shelves" orders make it hard to keep up, but you ought to still be able to find a household surface spray containing baygon, diazinon or ronnel. Spray it right on the centipedes and then spray all the openings or cracks around doors, windows, baseboards and plumbing and heating fixtures. Special attention ought to be paid all garages, carports and patios.

Dear Dorothy: Is there any way to get mildew out of unbleached muslin? I've tried salt and lemon juice in the sun, unsuccessfully. — Mrs. Chas. Meyers

What you've used is the mildest treatment so you'll have to go to something stronger. Mix one to two tablespoons of an oxygen bleach in one pint of hot water — as hot as is safe for the fabric. If the stains have been on for some time, you may have to soak the fabric in this solution overnight.

If, after laundering, the stains remain, try two tablespoons of liquid chlorine bleach to one quart of warm water. Sponge or soak the stain in this, allowing the material to stay in the solution for five to 15 minutes, then rinse thoroughly. This chlorine solution cannot be used on silk, wool or Spandex fabrics, or on materials with special finishes. Luck.

More data before probe of schools suspension

The Illinois Board of Education has requested more information before deciding whether to launch an investigation of suspension practices in Illinois schools.

Illinois School Supt. Joseph Cronin asked the board Thursday to authorize an investigation of nine school districts which suspend an unusually high number of students, especially students in minority groups.

Cronin's request was based on a national report released this fall that shows:

- Chicago schools suspended more students than any school in the nation during the 1972-73 school year.

- Six Illinois school districts are among 20 districts nationally which suspend the most students.

The three districts in the nation suspending the highest number of black students are in Illinois, and eight Illinois districts are among the top 20 in the rate of black student suspensions.

THE REPORT was issued by The Children's Defense Fund, using information from the U.S. Office of Civil Rights for the 1972-73 school year.

Cronin asked that nine Illinois districts be investigated to determine if the suspensions are based on racial discrimination. He also asked that all Illinois schools annually report the number of students suspended according to race and sex.

The nine districts are: Joliet Township 204, Bloom Township 206, Proviso Township 209, Zion-Benton Township 128, North Chicago Community 123, Thornton Township 205, Bremen Community 220, Worth Community 218 and Lockport Township 205.

Board members said there are several types of suspensions and said they would like more information on the report and the methods used to determine the number of students suspended in Illinois schools.

The way we see it

Senate moves for openness

Thanks in part to the example set by 48 states in recent years, Congress has moved to open up the federal government's business to the public. It's about time.

Just a few years ago, it was a daring idea to suggest that public officials should discard some of the secrecy which surrounded their decision-making.

But starting with Florida's landmark open meeting law, openness became the order of government. Illinois' law, passed in 1957, has been a good example of how a fair-minded law can encourage open and above-board government.

Last week, the U.S. Senate followed the example set by the states. It approved bills, proposed by Sens. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., and William V. Roth, R-Del., to open all Senate committees and Senate-House conference committees to the public and to order regulatory agencies to open their proceedings to the press and public.

The first bill, by an 86-0 vote, is not without reasonable limitations. A committee can vote to close meetings, but only in such narrowly defined matters as "national security." The new law will go into effect without further Congressional action.

The second bill, which now goes to the House, excludes all Cabinet departments, the White House and several federal agencies. But it does apply to all regulatory agencies or other agencies run by a board consisting of two or more persons named by the President and subject to Senate confirmation.

Both measures represent a forward step from the kind of arbitrary closed-door decision-making which has long marked the activities of our federal government. Perhaps in part because of the Watergate uproar, this era of secretiveness is beginning to end. The change is long overdue.

Consider the plight of the wayward duck

If you think you've been confused by this year's warm and sunny Indian Summer, consider the plight of some very disoriented ducks.

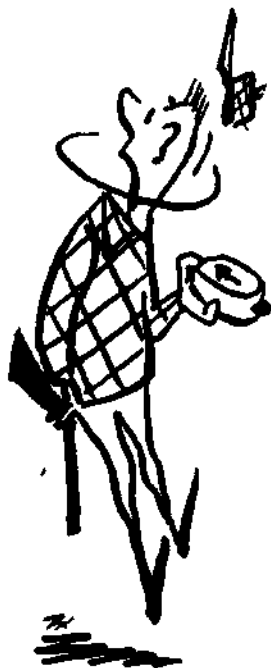

Two readers called to report to Jim Cook, The Herald's outdoor editor, that they had spotted mallards flying north, rather than south, in a recent week of record-breaking warm temperatures.

However, the ducks must not have been the only confused creatures. Illinois hunters, waiting to blast these birds from the skies as they headed south, must have been equally confused and very disappointed.

Now, however, with the temperature dipping almost daily and the nip of impending snowflakes in the air, we're told that these birds are about to make another attempt to head south.

Good luck. We're envious of any animal that can escape our northern climate. And this, we assure you, is the time to fly south.

Oil industry 'dismemberment' hit

The recent attempts by some members of the U.S. Senate to dismember the petroleum industry into independent segments of exploration, transportation, refining and marketing represents the advocacy of a giant step backwards in industrial development.

While it may be in vogue and a political plus to attack "bigness" in America, it is important our federal legislators realize that vertical integration in industry, that is, the involvement of companies in the phase-to-phase operations of production, is a positive phenomenon of modern technology. This industrial system came about through decisions based on factors that lead to the greatest marginal efficiency in production while creating a demand for products by offering goods at the least cost possible. The overall results of the integration of industrial segments in the petroleum industry has been the institution of a sound and dependable American-owned oil industry that has served the needs of our populace both in peace and war.

Integration of production functions is simply an attempt by companies to match the logic of separate technological processes with an orderly framework of operation. In the past it was important to the public welfare that oil companies integrate their facilities into smooth, economical and efficient organizations, that kept pace with the surging demands of an ever-growing economy and an ever-rising quality of life for our citizens.

THERE ARE those in Congress who seek to intervene in private business and dissolve an efficient petroleum industry by reverting to out-dated economic theory and social philosophies. These interventionists seem to believe that government has the power to improve the standard of living and foster economic growth by restricting development in the marketplace. They still believe that many small entities in all phases of production will result in the lowest possible price for the consumer.

I am interested in Ed DuPlessis' recent letter to the Fence Post in which he offered his views of the proposed computerized check-out and pricing system for grocery stores.

He begins with the bombshell: "America is great because of the free enterprise system."

What free enterprise system? The dozen or so food processing firms that prepare 95 per cent of the food? The five or six grocery chains that sell this food? The huge corporate farms, highly mechanized, that produce a large percentage of the crops? The dozen or so companies that produce 85 per cent of the furniture and appliances? The four or five motor companies that produce 90 per cent of the cars? The five or six companies that produce almost 100 per cent of the farm machinery? Or is he talking about the dozen or so department store and so-called discount store conglomerates that merchandise 85 per cent of what we buy?

He feels that a "free" market will weed out the inefficient operators who are unable to compete for the consumer dollar. As he puts it: "We will be able to shop where we please." There is a glaring fallacy in his argument; this "weeding out" process took place more than 25 years ago.

Has Mr. DuPlessis noticed that most of the large stores, automobile companies, soap and cosmetic companies, tobacco companies, ad infinitum, do about the same amount of advertising, sell their wares for very close to the same price, carry the same or comparable lines, and even congregate like so many sacred cows in the same shopping complexes, cities and even the same districts of cities?

HOW MUCH can one save by buying anything from a suit or dress, to a box of toothpicks, from Company A or Company B? Any housewife knows the answer!

I am astonished when people say, "XYZ or PQR corporation is competing for my hard-earned dollar." What the poor souls don't know is that they're regarded as just one of the raisins in a great big pie which is being sliced into neat segments; each huge corporation knowing beforehand how large a slice they are going to get — no matter what the average consumer thinks he is deciding.

There used to be a popular song. Its title: "Now It Can Be Told." The only question is who is going to tell it?

While these propositions may sound appealing when blended with "good old fashioned political rhetoric," the reality remains that it is the coordination of technological efforts that leads to the greatest marginal efficiency in the production process and ultimately results in the lowest possible cost to the consumer.

All that a good government can do to improve the status of its economy is to provide a setting where there are few obstacles to the progressive utilization of capital and the improvement of modern methods of production. The

Questions degree of free enterprise

Who is going to explain that computerized pricing is just the icing on a cake that has been in the corporate oven for more than 50 years? Who is going to explain that grocery chains, motor companies, soap companies, candy companies, cigaret companies, and companies that can beans, only way a free nation can improve upon the welfare of its citizens is to improve the level of output of products. The only way to raise the standard of living permanently is to raise the productivity of labor by raising the level of capital invested per head and improve methods of production.

We have yet to see any of the interventionists demonstrate how, by dismembering the petroleum industry into smaller segments, they will produce a more inexpensive petroleum product. Those who cling to such notions are unfortunately prisoners of their own attitudes. They fail to realize that "technological growth" has provided us with the most inexpensive energy in the world.

The almanac

(by United Press International)
Today is Friday, Nov. 14, the 318th day of 1975 with 47 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase.

The morning stars are Mercury, Mars, Venus and Saturn.

The evening star is Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Scorpio.

Robert Fulton, American inventor of the steamboat, was born Nov. 14, 1765.

On this day in history:

• In 1832, the first horse-drawn street car made its appearance in New York City. It carried 30 passengers.

• In 1940, German planes bombed Coventry, in southern England, destroying or damaging 69,000 of the 75,000 buildings in the city.

• In 1972, for the first time in its 76-year history, the Dow Jones Industrial stock averages closed above 1,000.

• In 1973, Britain's Princess Anne married commoner Captain Mark Phillips.

A thought for the day: Swedish inventor Charles Francis Kettering said, "A man must have a certain amount of intelligent ignorance to get anywhere."

(by United Press International)
EXETER, N.H., Nov. 14 — The provincial congress approved giving everyone paying taxes the right to vote and to allow anyone with real estate valued at 200 pounds to hold office. A candidate, however, could not be seated if he and his friends treated voters with liquor before or after the election.

Durant sees decay

Historian-philosopher voices hope that nation's excesses may ultimately cure her by own excess

by IRA BERKOW

Will Durant won't say for certain what this world is coming to, but he is willing to give us a few hints.

For one thing, he sees the possibility of the United States losing first-class status to Russia, China and Brazil.

Durant also sees this country in the process of decay, reminiscent of the Holy Roman Empire.

Yet he knows of the shifting of epochs and how America may yet achieve stability: "It may cure itself by its own excess."

DURANT, WHO IS 90 years old, has spent a lifetime telling us what once was so — that we may be prepared for what might be. He and his wife, Ariel, have just had published "The Age of Napoleon," the eleventh volume of their Story of Civilization series.

"It is interesting to observe the condition of the Roman Empire in about 180 A.D., after it had reached its height and was beginning to crumble," said Durant, by telephone from his Los Angeles home. "For that period very much resembled ours."

"Wealth made us narrow in outlook"

"The similarities are great wealth, great freedom, loss of religious faith and an overextension of world-wide avenues of commitment.

"Our great wealth has made us narrow in our outlook, and we are overly considered with acquisitions. Thinking becomes an unnecessary luxury."

"WEALTH LEADS TO freedom, but freedom is an awfully difficult business. And freedom without intelligence — without thought — becomes chaos."

"Our moral code has withered. Once, we had an allseeing, rewarding and punishing deity. He set limits for us because we feared him. Now we are unbounded — and humankind needs discipline to survive."

"So there is also a breakdown of the family structure. There is a terrible uprootedness. And perhaps that, with no god to keep us in tow and the insecurity of loss of family, we grow more violent. And modern science has helped our means of pugnacity, which is very great today."

And yet, said Durant, better times may be right around the corner, relatively speaking, like in 50 or 60 years.

"HISTORY HAS BEEN filled with alternation of pagan and puritan epochs," he said. "The religiousness of the old Greek and Roman ways ended with the dissolution of the Holy Roman Empire. That gave way to the Puritanism of Medieval Christianity, which ended in the more pagan-like Renaissance, which turned again into a more Puritanical epoch."

"People get sick of the excesses of one style of life and they are drawn to the opposite style. That is why I say that America may cure itself by its own excesses."

"Our moral code has withered"

Durant advises that the United States, like the Roman Empire which extended throughout Europe and great chunks of Asia, may be biting off more than it can chew. It is eating up its resources and thinning its blood while, at the same time, trying to keep the "blood vessels" — the protection of the great oceans — open for our commerce.

"We are doing pretty well..."

"The resources and the types of governments of Russia, China and Brazil — with their easy access to cheap labor — may be instrumental in making them the great powers of the future, and reducing America to second-class status. It won't be so bad, I don't think. We'll survive fine. Just as I'm sure Britain will, after it adjusts to going from a first-class power to second class."

DURANT SAYS HE is no pessimist, only a realist. "I am a descendant of a monkey," he said, "and I've never quite recovered from that. And so I understand the instincts that we suffer from — violent pugnacity, limitless acquisition, indomitable sexual desire — that are all so powerful in our blood."

"And considering that, I think we are doing pretty well. Any civilization that can produce a Christ, a Moses, a Plato, a Spinoza, a Shakespeare, a Beethoven — well, it can't be all bad."

"And then I think of the good and fine people I've known through the years, the many fair, generous, just and loving people. And I think after all that we'll work ourselves out of this mess. At age 90, I can say that I have lost my faith in the wickedness of mankind."

House OKs check interest bill

From Roll Call Report

The U. S. House of Representatives adopted an amendment last week preventing depositors from earning interest on checking accounts.

Commercial banks were the strongest opponent of the measure which was part of H.R. 10024 which also continues federal ceilings on interest rates and would require home mortgage lenders to publicize neighborhoods which receive their loans to combat redlining.

Interest paying checking accounts now are legal in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. An opponent of the amendment said the accounts are working well in those states.

Proponents of the amendment said the provision would corner a substantial portion of the national investment market. The entire bill was approved and sent to the Senate.

Illinois Congressmen voting for the amendment were Mikva, Derwinski, Russo, Hyde, Collins, McClory, Anderson, Michele, Rallsback, Findley, Shipley and Simon.

Representatives Murphy, Rostenkowski, Yates, Hall and Price voted against the measure.

Metcalf, Fary, Annunzio, Crane and Erlenborn did not vote. O'Brien answered present.

The House also passed a bill, 299-95, to expand the trend of establishing direct farmer-to-consumer marketing of food in urban suburban areas. The legislation would help states organize such program. The bill authorizes spending $1.5 million for the program in fiscal 1977.

YES—Mikva, Metcalfe, Murphy, Russo, Derwinski, Collins, Rostenkowski, Yates, Hall, O'Brien, Rallsback, Findley, Madigan, Shipley, Price and Simon.

NO—Hyde, Crane, McClory, Erlenborn, Anderson and Michel.

The House approved 267-113, a bill requiring the U. S. Postal Service budget to be controlled by Congress. The actions rescinds the agencies "semi-private" status.

Supporters of the move contended that despite the 1970 reorganization of the agency, U. S. citizens had continued to pay heavily for postal service mismanagement.

Opponents warned the bill would revive problems such as lack of long range plan.

Opponents said the bill would revive many of the problems that the reforms tried to improve. They cited such things like long-range planning, as some of the problems that may develop because of the new congressional controls.

NO—Mikva, Crane, Russo, Derwinski, Michel.

YES—Murphy, Collins, Rostenkowski, Yates, Hall, McClory, O'Brien, Rallsback, Findley, Madigan, Shipley, Price and Simon.

In the U. S. Senate, a bill was passed, 54-41 approving $3.1 billion in nonmilitary foreign aid. The program will distribute food and emphasize "self help" programs.

Both U. S. Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., and U. S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., voted in favor of the measure.

The Senate also adopted, 52-39, an amendment giving the neediest nations priority in receiving Food for Peace loans. The amendment would require that 80 per cent go to countries with a Gross National Product of less than $250 per capita. $876.4 million would be authorized during fiscal year 1976 for the program.

One supporter of the amendment, U. S. Sen. Richard Clark, D-Iowa, criticized the fact that two-thirds of the funds approved during the 1974 program was used in connection with the Vietnam war.

Opponents of the measure objected to the rigid formula that the amendment established.

NO—Stevenson.

Union leader to bid for state Senate seat

The president of the local lodge of the International Assn. of Machinists and Aerospace Workers has announced that he will run for the Democratic nomination to the Illinois Senate from the 5th Legislative District.

Tom Paul, a resident of Des Plaines and president of the union for six years, will oppose incumbent Sen. Howard Mohr, R-Forest Park, if he receives his party's nomination.

In announcing his candidacy, Paul said, "The 5th District needs a Democratic state senator in Springfield. On the crucial issues such as tax stability and unemployment, I believe I could better represent the views of the people of this community."

Paul, 50, of 1740 Webster Ln., said he will not seek reelection as union president. He is employed at United Airlines.

ICC rejects Bell's rate hike bid

The Illinois Commerce Commission (ICC) Thursday rejected a bid by Illinois Bell Telephone Co. for an interim $62.9 million annual service rate increase.

The interim request is part of an over-all Bell petition for $178 million in additional annual revenues. The utility sought an interim rate hike as a means of boosting its income before the Feb. 4, 1976 deadline on the full increase ruling. The $178 million request was filed March 7.

"We think the denial of our request is disappointing," said an Illinois Bell spokesman. "Back in December of 1973 the commission said 8.5 per cent was a fair and reasonable rate of return for Illinois Bell."

"OUR CURRENT rate of return is about 7.5 per cent, which is why we went to the commission with the interim request," the spokesman said. Illinois Bell needs a good rate of return to attract capital for construction and other telephone company operations.

Among the increases in customer costs sought by the utility are charges for directory assistance beyond a minimum of three calls per month, with some exceptions; timing of local calls in Chicago; and a 20-cent charge for coin calls.

Barbara Helmick, a spokesman for the Illinois Public Action Council citizen group in Chicago, said the organization objects to Illinois Bell's request "because Illinois Bell is already the most profitable Bell affiliate within the whole system. Since 1970, the ICC granted Bell $182.6 million in rate increases."

"The average consumer is feeling the economic crunch more than the big utilities are," Miss Helmick said. "Through research, we've shown that Illinois Bell overcharged customers more than $30 million last year. The State's Attorney's office agrees and says there was a $52 million overcharge."

Hearings before the ICC on the full Illinois Bell rate increase petition continue today at 9:30 a.m. in the State of Illinois Building, Chicago. Illinois Bell's operating income for the year ending June 30 was $207 million. Gross revenues during 1974 totaled $1.5 billion.

MONEY TALKS

What's silly about charging for on-the-cuff buying?

By Donald F. Morton, President
Arlington Heights Federal Savings & Loan Assn.

The managing editor of Barron's, the national business and financial weekly, in his recent front-page column decided the Federal Reserve's proposal that retailers be permitted to lop off up to 5 per cent for cash and tack on as much as a 5 per cent surcharge for users of credit cards.

"We see it as a sinister plot to discourage on-the-cuff buying (and eating and what-have-you)," wrote columnist Alan Abelson.

Describing this as a dastardly attack on freedom to fly now, pay later, Abelson concluded: "One might have thought the Fed would be too busy for this kind of silly stuff."

We don't find anything silly in making those who use credit pay for it. For too long the prudent person who prefers to pay cash and avoid the high cost of installment buying has had to help foot the increased bill on goods caused by credit users. It's about time that only those who use the credit cards should pay for whatever convenience or prestige they get out of them.

A final ruling on the proposal was expected prior to its going into effect on October 28.

We have to agree with one comment in the Barron's article. Says Abelson: "We have too much faith in the addiction of most Americans to go into hock one way or another to really believe that discounts or surcharges will prompt them to kick the habit."

This is a sad fact. It helps account for the plight of this wealthiest of all countries, which is capital-poor because its citizens have been brainwashed with the notion that it's "good for you, good for the economy."

Some of the frugality of bygone generations has to be recaptured fast if we are going to store up the reserves the nation needs to build for the future.

Stock prices fall 1.02 points after early rally

NEW YORK (UPI) — Despite an early rally, prices closed mixed Thursday as investors stormed the New York Stock Exchange with enthusiasm, then retreated in confusion over plans to help New York City avert default.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which had been ahead more than six points at one time, fell 1.02 points to 851.23. The closely watched indicator had jumped 13.70 points Wednesday.

Volume climbed to 26,070,000 shares from 23,960,000 Wednesday. It was the heaviest turnover since 25,249,390 shares were traded July 16.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index retreated 0.15 to 91.04 and the average price of an NYSE common share decreased by one cent.

Advances topped declines, 784 to 822, among the 1,857 issues crossing the tape. The 451 unchanged issues showed how much uncertainty remained.

"The market's action today just showed how sensitive it is to the New York City situation," said one analyst.

Warm up, stay cool universal routine for ballet dancers

by LYNN ASINOF

In worn practice clothes and bulky knitted leg warmers Kay Mazzo and Peter Martins of the New York City Ballet begin the well-known routine. Warm up and stay cool.

It starts with sprinkling some kitchen cleaner on the floor to prevent slipping. Then grabbing onto some backstage scaffolding for support, they begin the knee bends and stretches. It's about 45 minutes before the curtain goes up.

The two were in town last weekend to dance as guest artists with the Evanston Concert Ballet. They added glitter and provided box office draw for the local troupe which is in its second year.

Miss Mazzo knows the local dancers, having spent most of her childhood in Evanston.

THE VISIT THIS time was special. Chicago sees little of the NYCB, which hasn't danced here in five years, according to Phyllis Wills, artistic director of the Evanston company.

Miss Mazzo says she doesn't do guest performances very often because it is hard to leave New York. "You don't want to leave New York much because our season is going on," she said.

The backstage preparations appeared absurd. The Evanston dancers, soon to be presented in romantic tutus, retained the bulky leg warmers to keep their muscles from cramping. Some, with flowered headpieces in place, sipped coffee and tried to relax.

Miss Mazzo and Martins jested about their technique, playing games to check their turnout. She balanced an Ajax can on her leg. He tried to keep a piece of paper between his thighs while stretching his leg in a tendu.

ALTHOUGH THEY flew into town just prior to the performance, the New York dancers said there are few real problems with such jet age appearances. Miss Wills said the only major one was that music for "The Man I Love" pas de deux had to be taped Friday because no other tape was available.

The rest, Miss Mazzo said, "is just to make sure the stage is all right." That includes coordinating the cues for lighting and music as well as other technical matters.

When the curtain goes up, everyone backstage stops fidgeting. They are all too busy counting and listening. The dancers count for their cues, the stage hands cue for sound and lights.

From the wings, the dancers appear to be part of an intricate puzzle, weaving in and out of each other as they count and listen to the music. To those up front the movements flow, effortless and full.

But this is the magic the dancers were preparing for when they began that well known routine — warm up and stay cool.

Foster Brooks

Only a 'lush' on stage

by GENIE CAMPBELL

In Las Vegas not long ago a woman stood up and in a big huff marched out of Foster Brooks' nightclub show.

"Oh, that Brooks," she was heard to angrily exclaim. "He always comes out on stage loaded."

Even with all his recent exposure, the silver-haired comedian is still able to deceive a few gullible fans, make them believe he truly has imbibed one too many when, in actuality, he never puts a bottle to his lips.

"I stopped drinking and smoking 11 years ago," said Brooks during a phone interview from Las Vegas. I must have been plastered at the time or I never would have sworn off," he laughed but then added, "Rich Little recently said on a talk show, 'I know that Foster Brooks. He takes a little nip now and then.' I wish he hadn't said that. It's just not true."

BROOKS WORKED as a radio announcer for over 45 years before embarking for California and an acting career he had always envisioned. Though he landed numerous bit television roles he was at first singled out at studio golf courses for being able to rattle off a few good jokes.

His "lovable lush" routine didn't emerge until Brooks was asked to "get up and make people laugh for eight minutes" at a big Hollywood fund-raising event. The pay was $50. Brooks quickly agreed.

"While being introduced I happened to think of my father, who liked to tell stories while pretending he had had one or two too many drinks."

The crowd ate it up.

"It wasn't what I was saying but how I was saying it. They actually believed it. Before I became well-known, people did think I came up on stage plastered. They would believe it until I actually sobered up at the end of my act."

BROOKS WAS ASKED to appear at other celebrity functions including the Greensboro Pro-Celebrity Golf Tournament where Perry Como spotted him, and asked him to open for his show in Las Vegas. That and three guest television spots on Dean Martin's Show cinched it for Brooks.

Yet even though his "tipsy" career has skyrocketed in the last four years, he continues to do voice-overs for a small California radio station.

"That's because they let me do it when I really needed the money," he said.

If Brooks has his way, the lovable lush might just pass out altogether.

"I'D LIKE TO retire from this end of the business in the next couple of years and do some dramatic acting for what years I have left. I'm 63 you know . . . but I don't feel any different than 30."

"I'd never want to play Foster Brooks. I like to do character roles, a ranch foreman, a leader of a gang. I'd take a dialect or have my face scarred . . . anything that would make me some-

Statler Brothers turn Bible stories into songs

The Statler Brothers, an award-winning country group, has recently completed a unique project of two albums based on the Bible. The albums, sold separately, are "Holy Bible/Old Testament" and "Holy Bible/New Testament" (both Mercury records).

There is more of the Statlers' fine country sound — such as won them this year's Country Music Association award as the best group — than there is gospel music in the accepted sense. What the group has done is taken the Bible stories as the basis for its new songs (15 of the 22 selections are group originals).

The Statlers are not strangers to gospel music, however, as member Harold Reid points out: "We actually started out as a gospel group, but that was before we were recording. We all grew up in a religious atmosphere and go to church with our families to this day."

REID SAID THE group's current project resulted from numerous requests by fans for them to do gospel music. "We actually wrote the first tune in 1967," he said, "but because of our schedules, it just hasn't been possible to get it done until now. Besides the extensive research took up a great deal of time."

In addition to the format, the records are unusual in their approach to the subject matter. The Bible characters are viewed, frailties and all, as human rather than epic figures.

"We may raise a few eyebrows because within the tunes we point out things like Samson's downfall was Dilliah because she was the only thing he loved more than God," Reid said. "Or the fact that King David sent a soldier into battle to be killed because he wanted the man's wife."

IT IS FOR THAT very reason, and the story of Abraham in "Have a Little Faith" is another example, that the "Old Testament" album is the more interesting. Before most songs there is a spoken introduction which helps set the scene. Musically, the albums are rather simple, with limited use of instruments, although the use of strings and horns on occasion works out well.

In all, the Statlers' experiment

Playback

by Tom Von Malder

comes across very well. It remains to be seen if their fans like the idea enough to make the albums the group's usual bestsellers.

SOME OTHER FINE country albums complete this musical roundup:

"Night Things" by Ronnie Milsap (RCA records). Milsap's "A Legend In My Own Time" album won this year's Country Music Award as best album and this one should win next year's award as it is just about perfect. Milsap's great voice is given excellent songs to work with such as "Daydreams About Night Things," "Just In Case," "Who'll Turn Out the Lights" and "Play Born To Lose Again." The ex-rock singer even gets to rock on "I'll Be There" with its near gospel-like chorus.

"Dolly" by Dolly Parton (also RCA). The 1975 Country Music Award female vocalist of the year has another fine album of her own songs. All love songs, the music is often beautiful, such as on "My Heart Started Breaking" and "Most of All Why."

"GREATEST HITS Vol. 2" by Tom T. Hall (Mercury). Hall certainly is a fine storyteller. "I Love," "Ravishing Ruby" and "I Like Beer" are three of 11 standouts in this collection.

"Remembering . . . The Greatest Hits of Lefty Frizzell (Columbia). Frizzell, who died at age 47 last August, is remembered in some of the best of his early recordings, including "I Love You a Thousand Ways," "Mom and Dad's Waltz" and "If You've Got the Money I've Got the Time."

"Roy Clark's Greatest Hits Vol. 1" (ABC/Dot). Some of the Hee-Haw star's best, including "Yesterday, When I Was Young" and "Somewhere Between Love and Tomorrow."

Author leaves question of 'next war' unanswered

"CAN AMERICA WIN THE NEXT WAR?"
BY DREW MIDDLETON
Charles Scribner and Sons
$8.95

Former war correspondent Drew Middleton asks the question posed in the title several times in his book, but in the end the reader has a mish-mash of information and only a guess to what the answer might be.

Middleton concludes the U. S. could not win a war in Europe because it would take too long to ship troops across the Atlantic Ocean and NATO forces are badly outnumbered.

The biggest problem with Middleton seems to be he is rooted in World War II. Many of his strategic theories are based on the battles of this confrontation which took place 30 years ago.

THIS CONFUSING treatise also tells the reader that a significant number of U. S. military manpower figures are based on National Guard and Reserve unit strength. While predicting a war in Europe would last only three weeks, he notes it would take at least five weeks to get Reserve troops into the field. He also fails to mention that within 24 months National Guard and Army Reserve forces will be nearly depleted, because present members of those units will be discharged and the government has failed to develop a recruiting program to entice new persons into the National Guard.

Middleton also plays the role of apologist for the services by reporting that press accounts of drug and racial problems in the service are blown out of proportion.

HE ALSO SAYS that the services are doing everything possible to correct the problem. It seems that Middleton himself might be guilty of underplaying this problem.

The book stall

Generally the author fails to recognize that the next military involvement for the U. S. will probably be somewhere other than Europe, on the basis of current training. With all the advanced, weapons systems being developed, I find it hard to believe that the U. S. would get involved in another land war in Europe. It seems that a small scale conflict in the Middle East or South America would more likely be the next war. It's too bad the author did not see this probability.

"POWERS OF THE MIND," BY ADAM SMITH
Random House, $10

Befuddled by the problems of the 1970s, money expert Adam Smith posed the question: Could we really learn to control our internal process with our heads instead of with pills. He found an uncountable number of persons trying and a galaxy of different answers in talks with proponents of such exercises as Transcendental Meditation and extrasensory perception.

His wit and jaunty prose style keep the reader going through the sometimes murky territory.

Ice extravaganza

Go and feel young again

by PAUL LOGAN

Want to get to know your kids again?

Want to briefly be a kid again yourself?

To bring about both, take the whole family to the Ice Follies.

Running through Nov. 23 at Chicago Stadium, the Shipstads & Johnson show is one of the most attractive of the touring ice extravaganzas. There are normally two reasons that make this so — superstar Janet Lynn and the lovable muppets from "Sesame Street."

Although Janet is ill and will miss this two-week run, Cookie Monster, Big Bird and the rest of their furry friends are reason enough for treating your children (you don't have to have them to enjoy the show, but it helps) to this pre-Thanksgiving event.

THE TWO AND A HALF hour spectacular of fantasy, romance and slapstick moves with precision. This granddaddy of all ice shows has a reputation for flawless performances despite a multitude of acts with accompanying scenery and costume changes and opening night Tuesday lived up to all prior expectations.

Unlike the hardened veterans who usually accompany a typical circus or carnival, the follies is filled with young talent. Though names like Richard Dwyer and Susan Berens, Nancy and Leandre, Andrea Cooper, David Comb and Suzanne Russel are probably not well known, they'll be remembered soon enough by followers of the Ice Follies.

Masterful lighting techniques and lavish costumes turn performances of these skilled skaters into a seemingly endless fantasyland of excitement.

DEDICATED TO the Bicentennial, this 40th annual Ice Follies offers something for everyone. It has the traditional grace of Dwyer and Berens along with the upbeat, seemingly reckless style of Nancy and Leandre. It has the solo elegance of Daria Prychun and grace of Suzanne Russel along with the powerful feats of Atoy Wilson and David Comb.

Comb's routine is unique for his skates are on fire. His Hawaiian Ahi act employs many gymnastics moves and leaps in the dark.

Aside from the traditional acts as well as the huge chorus spectaculars, the fifth act in the program drew the biggest roars from the youthful crowd. Its title — "Sesame Street."

INTRODUCED WERE Big Bird, Cookie Monster, Ernie and Bert, Grover as well as a host of other furry faces, all bigger than life. When combined with the Sesame voices and music, the characters appeared so real that kids wanted to race down the aisles and join them on the ice.

Ranking second in popularity by the kids were "The Funsters." A takeoff from TV's "Munsters," this trio includes a witch, a hunchback and Frankenstein.

SHOW STOPPERS! Cookie Monster and Big Bird lead the lovable Muppet characters from Sesame Street at the Ice Follies. The Chicago Stadium attraction offers tickets from $2.50 to $6.50. This skating spectacular runs through Nov. 23.

Comedians Hans Letter and Mr. Frick also were crowd pleasers. As with all the funny acts, split-second timing is in primary focus.

The usual souvenirs — pennants, badges, little flashlights, etc. — are available, but the best buy is the program, $1. Each act is featured as it appears. For the kids, it's an ideal "show-and-tell" item.

The Stadium provides an ideal stage for the show. The hockey barriers are down, leaving an unobstructed view of the ice rink. Tickets, available through Ticketron, range from $2.50-$6.50.

Players host barn dance next weekend

A Thanksgiving "feast" of turkey, cheeses, wine and pumpkin pie will be among the featured events at The Players of Schaumburg's Bicentennial Barn Dance Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 22 and 23, at the group's new Limestone Theatre and Arts Center, 1165 Tower Rd., Schaumburg.

Other events include square dancing led by professional caller Harry Glass of the Elk Grove Village Glass Slippers and Boots Square Dance Club; a costume parade with prizes for those who come dressed in Early American outfits; and special entertainment segments featuring professional nightclub singer Arlene LaBrasca and dance/choreographer Linda Watters.

HIGHLIGHT OF THE two evenings will be a presentation of The Players' Touring Version of "Spoon River Anthology." Written by poet and lawyer Edgar Lee Masters, "Spoon River" utilizes the theater format plus music and dance to present a vivid portrait of the residents of early American rural Spoon River, Ill.

FEATURED PERFORMERS will be Dan Dutchak, Hanover Park; Larry Northway, Glendale Heights; Rick Rashinski, Roselle; Colleen Thompson, Hoffman Estates; Ann Unterreiner, Palatine; Terry Unumb, Arlington Heights; and Pat Tegethoff and Sonja Leraas, Schaumburg.

M.S. LERAAS ALSO directed "Spoon River" and Ms. Tegethoff and Marilyn Howitz, Palatine, serve respectively as musical director and pianist. Dance numbers were choreographed by Linda Watters, Hanover Park.

Admission to the Bicentennial Barn Dance is $4 for individual adults, $7 for couples, $3 for students and senior citizens. All proceeds will help finance a tour of "Spoon River" to local junior and senior high schools. Reservations can be made by calling 894-1387 and tickets will also be available at the box office both nights.

Belly dancing

A harem of belly dancers from classes offered through the Des Plaines YMCA, Leaning Tower YMCA in Niles, Wright Junior College and park districts throughout the area will be appearing in a belly dancing extravaganza tonight at LANCERS STEAK HOUSE, Golf and Meacham roads in Schaumburg.

Instructors for the classes are professional dancers FATIMA and SABRA. Entertainment will also include a dance band following the 8:30 performance. Tickets, $5, will be available at the door prior to the performance.

Settings enhance cuisine

An experience in Oriental dining for many people means simply opening a can of chop suey or driving to the nearest carry-out for Egg Foo Yung.

Those tired of this commercialized version of what should be a culinary art should sample the cuisine at two Polynesian restaurants in the area, Fu-Lama Gardens in Woodfield Commons Shopping Center Schaumburg and the Kona Kai in the Chicago Marriott Hotel on Higgins Road in Park Ridge.

Polynesian is a mixture of Chinese, Japanese, Hawaiian and Filipino cooking and both restaurants capitalize on the two most important ingredients in Oriental dining — atmosphere and fresh food.

AT FU-LAMA GARDENS (meaning wealth, beauty and grace) the pale blues, greens and browns worked into the decorating scheme produce a quiet, unhurried setting whether you are there for the evening meal or for lunch when customers tend to be a bit rushed.

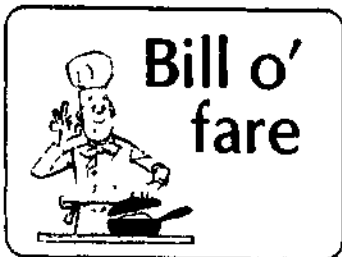

Featuring:
Fu-Lama Gardens
Kona Kai

Two friends and I began our meal with a Pupu tray, $2.00 per person, which contained a sampling of most of the appetizers served at Fu-Lama. All were excellent. The mixture included Tiki Nests (fried won ton with crab meat filling), egg rolls, barbecued ribs, Beef Tapa-Tapa and fried shrimp.

Both a hot pepper sauce and a sweet and sour sauce are served with the appetizers. Most people prefer the sweet and sour sauce simply because the other is too hot for American palates. But last year a Korean friend told me the "best way" is to mix the two together. I've found it to be a worthy idea.

TWO OF US split the Volcano Sizzling War Ba, a dinner for two, $8.95 per person. Made with chicken, shrimp, barbecued pork and a combination of Chinese vegetables, it is served over sizzling rice, comparable to the American popcorn. A bit of oil is put in the bottom of a pan and cooked rice is added for "popping." The result is supposed to be a crunchy rice. Unfortunately ours was not. It was the only disappointment we encountered.

The third member of our party chose Chicken Kalakala, $6.25, a sauteed mixture of chicken, mushrooms, bamboo shoots, water chestnuts and celery served with a topping of cashew nuts. It was very tasty.

Upon other occasions I have enjoyed Chicken Moo Goo, $4.70, which Robert Eng, manager of Fu-Lama Gardens said, "is an American Chinese dish designed to please almost anyone."

ALSO, RECOMMENDED for seafood lovers is the King Crab Martini, $6.40, sauteed in light rum sauce with tidbits of ham. Its extremely rich but delicious.

Our service was excellent and most gracious. In addition to the quiet color scheme, giant tanks of tropical fish are set into one side of the dining room. The entrance is enhanced by a large carved wooden fountain. An Hawaiian combo serenades evening diners. Reservations are advised, particularly on weekends.

An island atmosphere is featured at the Kona Kai (the protector of the sea). Touted as the largest Polynesian restaurant between Philadelphia and San Francisco, it features a natural tropical waterfall and stream, hand-carved outriggers, monkey pod tables in the cocktail lounge, wooden bridges and enough low light to insure privacy at each table.

MANAGER DON SIT, feels Polynesian dinners should always be accompanied by an atmosphere "where you can escape to enjoy soft sounds." And the Kona Kai is definitely such a place.

At our captain's suggestion, my friend and I ordered Cho Cho, $2.75, and Crab Rangoon, $2.55, for appetizers.

Cho Cho are marinated steak slices on skewers and each person broils them to preference on a small hibachi. The Crab Rangoon is the fried won ton. Both were excellent though they skimp somewhat on the crab meat filling for the latter.

My friend chose as his main dish Madras Curry, $6, a mild rather than hot curry with shrimp. Served with a wide assortment of condiments ranging from the sweet to the bitter flavors, it was very much to his liking.

AT OUR CAPTAIN'S suggestion, I ordered Waikiki Duck, $5.95, a pressed mandarin duck crisped with peanut oil and served in a sweet and sour plum sauce. Sometimes disappointed with ill-prepared duck dishes served in other restaurants, I was extremely pleased with my choice. The meat was tender and the flavor not overpowered whatsoever by the sauce.

To accompany our entree, we split an order of Yang Chow Fried Rice, $2.25. Stir fried rice mixed with tiny bits of shrimp, poultry and vegetables, it was extremely tasty and more than enough for the two of us.

It is interesting that prices for main dishes compare favorably to those of less exotic Oriental restaurants.

Reservations are always recommended. Dress is somewhat formal.

For both restaurants allow plenty of time. It would be a mistake to expect (or want) to be in and out in an hour.

—Barbara Ladd

Good humor plus a few surprises

Audiences anticipate FOSTER BROOKS. Just two steps out on stage even before he begins to recite one of his cornball stories, the people are already wild. And it's infectious.

To set records straight, Brooks doesn't try to act drunk on stage. In fact he attempts to do just the opposite, appear sober when he's pretended to have had one too many. That is what is so appealing about his routine and very believable too.

About family and friends, funny incidents in his life, Brooks' tales are nursery rhymes compared to those of most standup comedians today. But then it's not so much what Brooks has to say anyway, but how he manages to get it out in a middle of a hiccup or a stutter.

Putting aside the "lovable lush" image, Brooks surprised many opening night at the BLUE MAX when he broke out in a deep baritone voice, though actually he sang on the radio as a kid, 50 years ago in his hometown of Louisville, Ky.

And catch the poem dedicated to his wife. That's his too.

But Brooks allows himself to fall into a nightclub groove when he chooses to end his show singing "My Way." The song is fairly overripe these days. But then Brooks, I suppose, has more of a right to sing it than anyone else. He didn't even enter this business until four years ago at age 59, and certainly he's done it "his way."

Preceding the comedian on stage is a young, vivacious singer named CHARLIE, who with a voice that grabs, does a powerful rendition of "Don't Rain on My Parade" and a medley of Judy Garland favorites. Foster Brooks and Charli appear in tandem through Nov. 22.

Construction began recently in Schaumburg on a RED LOBSTER RESTAURANT which will feature a variety of seafood at moderate prices. The restaurant located on Mall Drive, is scheduled to open in late February of next year.

The Schaumburg restaurant will be the third in the Chicago area. The eight-year-old chain consists of some 160 Red Lobster Restaurants nationwide.

The musical comedy "SOMETHING'S AFOOT" opens next Friday at CHATEAU MYSTERIE THEATRE located in the Chateau Louise Resort in Dundee.

Another opening is taking place Sunday at the castle resort to ignite the new discotheque DISCOVERY. It's about the fourth disco to open in the northwest suburban area just in the last year.

Festival Theatre opens new season with comedy

"Rosenkrantz & Guildenstern Are Dead," a comedy by Tom Stoppard, has been chosen by Schaumburg Festival Theatre as the first production of its fourth season. It will be presented Nov. 21, 22, 28 and 29 at Schaumburg Township Library.

The comedy takes place during the Elizabethan period of Shakespeare's "Hamlet." Playwright Stoppard has recreated Rosenkrantz and Guildenstern, two minor courtiers to Hamlet, into modern day, paradoxical characters.

Dave Schroeder, Inverness, will portray the interrogative, empiricist Rosenkrantz and Dennis Smith, Des Plaines, the analytical, syllogistic Guildenstern.

SUPPORTING PLAYERS are Dick Kelley, Hoffman Estates, The Player; Ken O'Connor, Rolling Meadows, Alfred; Bob O'Connor, Rolling Meadows, and Chris Lindgren, Tom Cripe and John Kennedy, Arlington Heights, Tragedians; Bill Lindgren, Palatine, Hamlet; Doreen Danielson, Wood Dale, Ophelia; Arthur Clevenger, Hoffman Estates, Claudius; Roxanne Lively, Rolling Meadows, Gertrude; and John Buckley, Rolling Meadows, Polonius.

JOSEPH McAULIFFE, Schaumburg, will direct the production.

Crew heads are Jan Hurley, props; Irene Wirean, special effects; Ruth McAuliffe, costumes; Sheila Riggert, box office; Bill Lindgren, producer and ads; Jo Ann Wolf, assistant director and publicity.

TICKETS ARE $2.50 and curtain time is 8:30 p.m. Information, 258-2074.

OUR FIRST ANNUAL THANKSGIVING BUFFET Just one more thing to be thankful for.

You loved our Easter champagne buffet. So we know you'll find our Thanksgiving feast the best assembled since the Pilgrims shucked corn with the Indians. Turkey and ham, of course, along with venison, quail, scallops, oysters, hasen pfeffer — even Birds Nest Bouquetiere with Hollandaise Sauce — plus literally dozens of other delicatibles. All regally presented against a backdrop of ice sculptures and other decorative tributes to the good life. Just $7.75 per person ($4.50 each for children under 12) for everything you can eat, including salads, beverages and desserts. And you can meet Bugs Bunny. In person. He'll be dropping in from Marriott's Great America Theme Park at 2:00 and 3:00 to visit with the kids.

To be sure you're included, call Miles Standish now at 634-0100 to make your reservation. And then start working up an appetite. November 27 is closer than you think.

Only a 'lovable lush' on stage

Movies appeal to Brooks, even a television series might, but with certain reservations.

"There's been talk about a regular Foster Brooks special or show where I'm the featured star. I've read a number of different scripts that are always being submitted to me. I would like to do it, but it would have to be a good one. I'm not about to do one and three weeks later see it taken off the air."

And it's obvious that whatever Brooks might choose to do, he'll be featured sober.

"BEING THE LUSH brought me success. I appreciate that, but I also wish they'd start asking me to do something else. I don't mind going on talk shows if they don't want a standup bit or routine. They can ask how my life is going and about my family. Or, they can ask me to read a poem."

That's a side of Brooks few people know about even though two of his poems, "Riley on the Mound" and the "Casey at the Bat" story from the pitcher's point of view are both in the Baseball Hall of Fame.

His first poem, written in 1963, was to his youngest daughter, then a teenager, and "the most wonderful thing in my life," he said.

And neither do many people realize that Brooks makes a mean bowl of chili. But in Las Vegas on a minute's notice he can whip up a batch for 30 to 50 people in a hotel kitchen.

FOR ALL HIS on stage storytelling Brooks is in fact a self-proclaimed quiet, unassuming man.

"What do I do in my spare time? I mostly stay in my room. Someone once wrote that 'Foster Brooks with all that show business success and glory is actually a very lonely man.' And you know, that's right.

"I don't like to go around with show people. I'm not running to a party every night and listening to all the phonies. Women coming in the room dragging their mink coats on the floor. You can spot them in a minute.

"I'd rather be with my family or my brothers in Louisville. Oh, I have some very nice friends too," he added listing John Wayne, Dennis James and Fred Astaire as three close ones.

"Oh, that reminds me," he said. "I promised I'd make some chili tonight." And he was off, to whip up a brew with plenty of bite but served plain, without a drop of whiskey.

Special Strauss week

'Twigs' both dull, funny

by BOB GALLAS
(A review)

Despite a host of dull spots, George Furth's sensitive and funny "Twigs" survives and is at times entertaining as Des Plaines Theatre Guild's latest offering.

The production takes a look at life utilizing human tragedy, squabbles and love.

Virginia Velenchik stars in the multiple role of the three sisters and their mother. Although delightful at times in her portrayal, the roles overall are just too taxing for an amateur actress.

Velenchik's first role as the nervous chatterbox Emily never gets rolling and consequently, the production opens on a bad note. Her characterization of the widowed Emily is poor. There is little rapport between Mrs. Velenchik and her newly-found suitor, the moving man Lou. The pair's romance is hard to believe.

THE PACE PICKS up with the second scene, the most touching of the work. Mrs. Velenchik is Celia, a pathetic figure with only a few dreams of the past, happier days. Her husband Phil, retired Army lifer now serving time at odd jobs on Army bases, is portrayed by J. Neil Boyle. Phil is too busy reminiscing with his old comrade Swede, played by Bednie Velenchik, to allow her even a memory. Celia's recollections of a happier moment as a movie chorus-line dancer — "it got cut out!" — is touching.

The dull spots, characteristic of Act I, are few in Act II. In the first scene, Mrs. Velenchik portrays the third sister, middle-aged Dorothy and her round and loving husband Lou, ably played by Dick Galloway. John T. Klein is also good in the role of the deaf and ever-popping-up Uncle Ned.

THE FINAL scene provides the most laughs, highlighted by Mrs. Velenchik's performance as the cantankerous mother of three sisters. Her slice-of-life scenario features her "deathbed" marriage to an equally cantankerous "Pa," played by Tom Rowland. It seems the two just never had time to get around to it.

J. Neil Boyle portrays the Catholic priest who marries them and insists the elderly pair sign a form promising to bring their children up Catholic.

The complicated set changes are done in full view of the audience and may be interesting to some who are unfamiliar with backstage heroics necessary to make a show go. But seasoned theater-goers may be rather bored with the entire process which is time-consuming and becomes tedious.

MRS. VELENCHIK'S makeup changes, also executed in front of the audience while the scene switches are taking place, distract. While the scene switching may be all right, Mrs. Velenchik had enough trouble changing characters from role to role without additionally reminding the audience of it.

The show has only one sound effect and it bombs. A stage-right toilet flush comes out peculiar piped through the theater's sound system.

The play continues tonight and Saturday and again Nov. 21-22. Tickets, 25¢-1.21, between noon and 8 p.m.

THE GREATEST SHOW IN TOWN.

Lawry's The Prime Rib is not just another great restaurant. It's a show that starts the minute you sit down. Your waitress arrives with a crisp salad on a bed of ice. As she dresses it, she spins it and tosses it while you watch.

Then the great, gleaming cart wheels up to your table. The Master Carver opens it up for you to see the magnificent prime ribs of Mid-western beef.

The slices are generous — thick or thin, rare or well-done, with bone or without. Then Lawry's famous spinach or buttered garden peas, baked Idaho or mashed potatoes, and Yorkshire pudding.

Prime ribs of beef is Lawry's only entree for dinner. Luncheon, from 11:30 to 2, offers a varied menu with other choices.

In all Chicago, you won't find a better evening. Certainly not one that will please your palate and your pocketbook so much.

Ask Andy

Barracudas as fierce as sharks

Andy sends a complete 20-volume set of the Merit Students Encyclopedia to Mike Covington, 16, of Winston-Salem, N.C., for his question: WHAT IS A BARRACUDA?

Let's face it, the sea is a hungry place where most of the fishes greedily gobble up their neighbors. Some are fiercer than others and, naturally, the one called tiger-of-the-sea must be one of the fiercest. He is the giant barracuda, who sometimes attacks people. True, he may deserve his bad reputation, but his smaller cousins are less fierce and most of them are harmless, at least to people.

Some experts believe that the giant barracuda is as dangerous as the man-eating sharks. In fact, a toothy underwater attack may be blamed on a shark when the real culprit is a barracuda. This is most likely to happen in the warm blue waters around the West Indies, where the giant barracuda is most at home.

The fearsome fellow may reach a length of eight feet. His mighty muscular body is shaped somewhat like a long torpedo. His lower jaw sticks out in front and both jaws are filled with terrible teeth. Several of his fang-type teeth are almost an inch long and when he closes his greedy jaws they fit together and slice like scissors.

This tiger of the sea is at home in warm tropical seas, where he usually preys on smaller fishes. He is always hungry, always hunting, and people who know him say he is both curious and cunning. Some say that he often herds a group of fishes into a corner and traps them there until he is ready for his next meal.

Sometimes he hunts in the mangrove swamps around the West Indies. There the fishermen live in fear of him. His eyes are sharp enough to see moving objects, even in murky water, and he uses sight rather than smell to do most of his hunting. Some experts suspect that human swimmers tempt his curiosity, which may lead to an attack. No wonder they call him the tiger-of-the-sea.

Aside from this ghastly giant, there are about 20 other members of the barracuda family. They range in length from 18 inches to four or five feet. All of them are toothy, torpedo-shaped fishes — but only the giant of the family is a serious menace to man.

We know a lot about how, where and when the giant barracuda is likely to attack humans. But very little is known about his family life. Some experts suspect that the eggs are left to hatch in the open sea. Growing barracudas swim and hunt together — but the adults tend to be loners. There comes a time when all barracuda crimes are forgiven — when the small types are caught in healthy sea water they are said to be very good to eat.

Andy send a 7-volume set of the Chronicles of Narnia to Jean Bertrand, 11, of Sioux City, Iowa, for her question: WHAT IS THE CELSIUS SCALE?

The Celsius scale is based on the metric system and designed to measure temperature. Its middle section grades the difference between freezing and boiling water in 100 equal degrees. Degrees of exactly the same size are used to measure temperatures below freezing and above boiling water.

For a long time a temperature scale of this sort was called the centigrade scale. But in 1948, an International Conference on Weights and Measures decided to change the word centigrade. Instead, the members of the conference renamed the neat metric scale for Anders Celsius of Sweden, who invented it way back in 1742. The old Fahrenheit scale also measures the difference between freezing and boiling water. But it is more clumsy because freezing point is 32 degrees and boiling point is 212 degrees. Someday we may drop this old system altogether, in favor of the much simpler Celsius scale.

Seven notrump ranks top in duplicate

When you use an artificial two-club opening with the two-diamond response to show a very bad hand (no ace, no king, no two queens) and an artificial two-heart response to show some values, but no definite bid, then the responses of two spades, three hearts, three diamonds and three clubs become natural. Most players have decided that these suit responses should guarantee a suit of five cards or more, headed by at least two of the four top honors.

Today's North-South were playing this method in a match-point game.

Once North responded three clubs, South could count on five clubs and six spades. Give his partner an ace and seven would wrap up. He Black-wooded, found out about that ace and bid seven notrump.

In rubber bridge he might well have bid seven spades to score the 150 honors. In duplicate bridge, where honors don't count, there were two reasons not to. The first was that notrump counted 10 points extra and 10 points could win a match-point game. The second was that if some one held six trumps to the nine spot against him the spade grand slam would not make, but there would still be 13 notrump tricks.

Parents urged to watch kids' TV

by JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — When it comes to children's television, don't knock it until you watch it.

That's the message ABC and the National Education Assn. are trying to get across with something called Open House Week for Children's Television, which runs from Saturday through Nov. 22.

"It's such a simple concept that it gets confusing," said Squire D. Rushnell, vice president, children's programming, ABC entertainment.

"THE PROBLEM WITH children's television is that children watch it and grownups do not."

He said he was referring to all children's programming, not just ABC shows, when he said that in the last few years "children's programming has gone through a revolution," with less violence and much more sound, even educational values; but not enough parents recognize what has happened.

Rushnell, who is the father of daughters aged 11 and 14, said the whole open house concept, which ABC originated last year, occurred to him when he realized that without his children reminding him to mark a specific date for Open School Week in his calendar, he wouldn't have the foggiest what they were doing in the classroom.

"I'd like to see parents make a note on their calendars to watch television with their children for one week, just as they visit school one week a year," he said.

Idle thoughts for a Friday

TELEVISION TALK:

Have you been listening carefully to those Monday night television games? The man in the middle — blond, blue-eyed Frank Gifford — is a pretty funny guy. Maybe the funniest and smartest, of the three that handle the pro football telecasts.

I have had to learn to like Gifford's work. I resented his taking the place of Keith Jackson as the Monday night play-by-play man, a classic example of an ex-athlete, New York and all that, shoving an accomplished sports-caster out of the booth.

Times change and opinions change. You have to listen very carefully, for Gifford's humor is very subtle, but also very pointed. He knows what he

As more and more Monday nights pass, he becomes more of himself, a little bolder each week, and he is starting to come through as a very interesting man, a very aware man and one who is pretty honest.

You have to respect Gifford because he is handling a very difficult assignment in a very stylish way. He will outlast both Howard Cosell and Alex Karras because he is himself on the air while the others are "gimmick guys," and television eventually devours gimmicks, no matter how sensational they may seem at the moment.

HOCKEY TALK:

Why are there so many fights in hockey when there are so few in pro football, which is even more physical?

What makes hockey exciting is when there is that endless flow of action from one end of the rink to the other. But that requires great skill and apparently this is no longer possible in an era of expansion when the talent has been diluted so badly. So they brawl to make their headlines.

I don't mind a good fight — if it is spontaneous. Men always will fight when they're engaged in combat. But this business of barging into each other and brawling all over the place is a joke. What does it prove?

I buy the old theory that a man's more of man when he walks away from a fight rather than when he starts one. What skill is required to drop your gloves and start flailing away — or start swinging your hockey stick at the other guy?

Maybe the public likes it, I don't know but give me the Montreal Canadiens going from one end of the ice and making a great play on the net and then the Boston Bruins coming right back and making a great play at the other end of the ice.

That's what it is all about; or used to be anyway. Professional hockey bores me as it is played today.

FOOTBALL TALK:

Fremd High School product Jerry Finis had a good look last Saturday at the awesome offensive power of Ohio State, the nation's No. 1 team. Finis, an offensive guard through much of his career, was thrust into a starting defensive tackle role for the University of Illinois.

Was Finis, a former prep All-Stater, impressed after the Buckeyes buried Illinois, 40-3, wearing down a defensive unit that spent most of the day on the field?

"Their offensive line wasn't the kind that blew you out," Jerry reports. "They try to finesse block you, they're real quick off the ball."

"Green (quarterback Cornelius) is so quick. A couple times I was pursuing him and if it had been a normal quarterback, I would have gone right at him. But because it was Green I had to angle him. He's so fast."

"And Archie Griffin is phenomenal. He gets hit behind the line but he still gets his yardage."

Welcome, Jerry, to the club of defensive players who have been dazzled by the awesome Buckeyes. Now don't relax. Michigan comes to town Saturday.

BOOK TALK:

Watching the parents at high school sports events often can be as entertaining as watching the event itself.

That's why I was particularly anxious to read the book "My Son, The Jock," by Gerald Green. It is a middle-aged man's look at his son, a 17-year-old defensive football star. The son is a surprise athlete in a family without athletic accomplishments.

Green, who wrote "The Last Angry Man," followed his son during a high school football season, asking questions, reading the play book and cheering for him on the sidelines.

Throughout it all you learn a lot about Gerald Green's values, his love for his son and his reminiscences on American life.

When Green is writing of the rather pitiful team and explaining his son, who loves all sports but who also has other interests, he does well.

The author's word pictures of parents, coaches, players all crowding the sidelines anticipating defeat are good ones, and anyone whose son has participated in sports, particularly football, should enjoy the book.

Unfortunately, Green gets too carried away writing about himself, his own shortcomings, and this exercise in flagellation becomes tedious.

The book is worth reading if you skim the parts on the author's migraine headaches, his weak ankles, bad eyes and overprotective mother.

BASKETBALL TALK:

Believe it or not, the high school basketball season opens tonight. I don't believe it.

by KEITH REINHARD

With the oblong-shaped pad hardly deflated and the shoulder pads not even on the shelves long enough to gather a few specks of dust, basketball muscles its way to the forefront of the Herald area sports scene tonight at Wheeling's gymnasium.

Not bothering with any patsy or even a mediocre outfit for an opening tuneup, the Wildcats jump right into the thick of things when they entertain Addison Trail at approximately 8 p.m. It is one of the earliest cage starts in the history of the area.

And one of the most challenging. The Trail Blazers lost only three of 27 contests last winter and have a solid nucleus of returnees headed up by all-state candidate Scott Anderson. They have been ranked among the top 10 teams in the entire Chicago area.

The 'Cats figure to be no slouches themselves however. While coach Ted Ecker has only a pair of lettermen (and just one of them a starter) from the Wheeling squad which produced a fine 19-6 slate last season, the 'Cats have a tradition of roundball excistence and Ecker is optimistic about extending that tradition.

"We should have more quickness than we've had the past few years and I'm anticipating a good defensive season. . . . this looks to be one of the stronger facets of our game," the veteran Wildcat mentor observed. "Getting ready for competition this quickly has put some extra pressure on us, of course, but Addison Trail has the same thing to contend with."

The Blazers will also have to contend with veteran Keith Schildt (6-6), Wheeling's leading scorer and rebounder in '74-75 and Carl Krueger, a 6-3 ready reservist last year who promises to augment the 'Cat inside punch.

After that Ecker will be drawing chiefly from a jayvee unit that carved a solid 16-3 slate last season and produced the likes of 6-1 senior Al Begrowicz and 6-0 junior brother Brian, 5-10 senior Dave Schultz, 6-1 senior Glen Barry, 6-2 senior Rick McGowan and 6-4 senior Tom Polster. The Begrowicz's, Schultz and Barry all saw limited action with the varsity last season.

Also figuring in Ecker's plans is Danny Larsen, a 6-0 sophomore. Rounding out the team are 5-11 junior Rick Heredia, 6-1 senior John Munro and 6-2 junior Keith Block, a transfer from nearby Hersey.

Mainstays for Addison Trail in addition to 6-7 Anderson are 6-6 Steve Long and 6-4 Mike Kalamiki. Anderson averaged 18 points and 10 rebounds a game last season while the Blazers lost only a pair of mid-season bouts to potent East Leyden and a sectional contest to powerful Proviso East.

Tonight's contest will be followed next weekend by a landslide of area openers with Arlington traveling to Proviso West, Palatine hosting Maine East, Hersey taking on visiting Crystal Lake, Buffalo Grove journeying to Cary Grove, Lake Park coming in to Forest View and Hoffman Estates welcoming in Fenton on Friday.

Next Saturday, Nov. 23, Schaumburg, Conant and Prospect follow suit with their lid-lifters, at home against Maine North, Fenton and Evanston respectively.

Corzine, Pancratz return home

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

Hersey High School basketball fortunes past and present will be on display in the Huskies' gym tonight when Roger Steingraber unveils his 1975-76 team in an intrasquad game to be followed by Ray Meyer's DePaul Blue Demons at eight o'clock.

The Demons, who finished 15-10 last year, are anchored by two former Hersey stars, senior Andy Pancratz and sophomore Dave Corzine.

The 6-11 Corzine, who was second in total rebounds last year, will continue to give the Demons board strength. As a freshman Corzine averaged 8.3 rebounds a game and demonstrated considerable poise for a first year man.

His strength, agility and soft shooting touch will make him a dominant force on the court this season.

Pancratz is the DePaul captain this year and the young Demons will need the leadership qualities this senior can provide. Expected to start at a forward, Pancratz has used his jumping ability and shooting accuracy to prove he can play with the best in major college basketball.

The Demons are a young team and lost seven lettermen from last year's team, including Bill Robinson, who led the team to scoring and rebounding and was picked in the first round of the National Basketball Association draft by the Kansas City Kings.

The Demons also lost their starting guards, Greg Boyd and Jim Bocinsky.

Meyer is not without a surplus of players to fill the shoes of the departed, though.

Joe Ponsetto, a 6-7 forward who led Proviso East to the state championship two years ago, will provide muscle on the front line.

Fighting for the starting forward job alongside Pancratz will be 6-5 Curtis Watkins from Thornton High School, who was the South Suburban Player of the Year in 1975. He was the fourth player in Thornton history to top 1,000 points for a career.

The guard slots are up for grabs and Meyer has a wide variety of talented players to choose from.

The director of the offense, from his point guard position, figures to be Ron Norwood, who averaged 14.3 points a game last season to place second to Robinson. Meyer thinks the 6-4 Norwood has All-America possibilities.

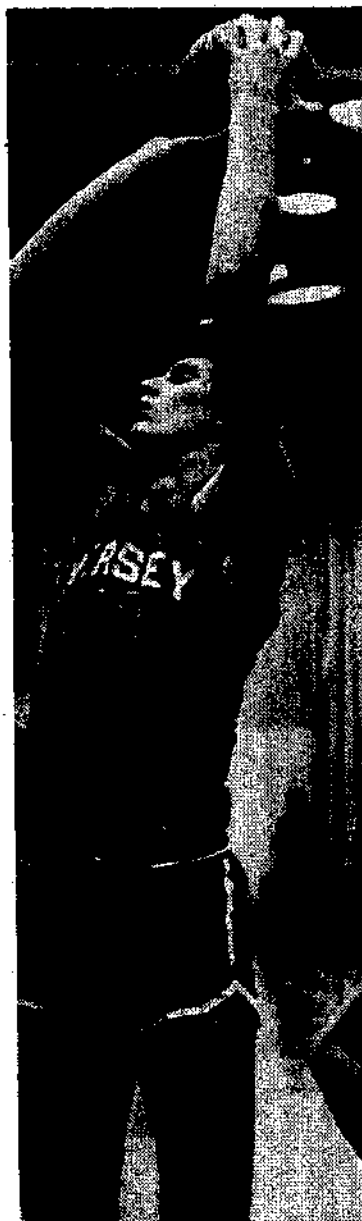

The wilds of New Jersey which provided Norwood for the DePaul program, may also supply a running mate for the Blue Demon senior.

His name is Gary Garland and as a senior at East Orange Scott High School last year, he popped for 23 points a game.

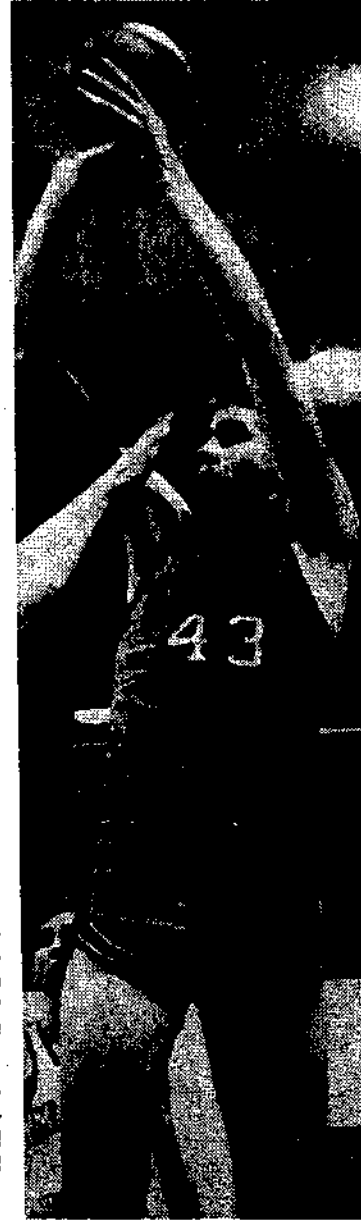

Other candidates for the starting guard position include 6-4 Emmett McGovern, a freshman from St. Pat's, juniors Randy Ramsey and Greg Coeldo and sophomore Randy Hook.

Hersey will return three starters from last year's 6-20 club including All-Conference forward Clyde Glass, junior Tom Frye and senior Tom Burzak.

Admission for the night is $1 for adults and 50 cents for students.

ICE BOXING. Hockey players seem to be punching jaws more and hitting pucks less in the NHL. Black Hawks' Grant Mulvey (22) connects against Philadelphia's Jack Melihargy in the first period Thursday at the Spectrum.

Black Hawks blow 4-goal advantage! Flyers earn tie

Philadelphia's Ross Lonsberry scored two goals and the Flyers wiped out a four-goal deficit to tie the Chicago Black Hawks 5-5 Thursday night in a battle of NHL division leaders in Philadelphia. Dave Schultz scored the tying goal for the Stanley Cup champions at 2:29 of the third period after taking a pass from Gary Dornhoefer.

The Black Hawks were pressured throughout the last two periods but Gilles Villemure fended off shots by Bobby Clarke and Bill Barber late in the game to preserve the tie.

The Flyers gave up two goals in the first 33 seconds of play. John Marks put the Black Hawks ahead 2-0 within a space of 19 seconds with long-range shots on goalie Wayne Stephenson. Chicago appeared to be pulling away when it went ahead 4-0 on a goal by Dennis Hull at 15:25 of the first period and a score by Ivan Boldirev at 3:26 of the second period.

The Flyers then began their comeback when Ross Lonsberry put them on the board at 6:13 of the second period. But Chicago came right back to make it 5-1 at 9:49 of the period when Bobby Sheehan scored on a breakaway.

The Flyers then scored two goals within 18 seconds with Lonsberry scoring his second goal at 18:37 after taking a pass from Dornhoefer. Dornhoefer brought the Flyers to within 5-3 with his score a little more than a minute later. Bill Barber put a 55-foot slap shot past Villemure at 0:27 of the third period and made the score 5-4.

4 area skaters among leaders at Randhurst

Four Northwest Suburban youngsters were among the leaders through Thursday's preliminary rounds at the Upper Great Lakes Regional Figure Skating Championships at Randhurst Twin Ice Arena in Mount Prospect.

In the Senior Men's competition, Park Ridge's David Santee was first with Prospect Heights' Frank Swedding second.

Karen DeAngelo of Mount Prospect is third and Tammy Gambill of Wheeling is fourth in the Senior Ladies' division behind Teri Kilndworth of Edina, Minn.

Other leaders during this four-day competition that winds up with finals today and Saturday are as follows:

Intermediate Ladies, Group I — Cheryl Klonowski, Milwaukee; Intermediate Ladies, Group II — Maria Mezio, Berwyn; Junior Ladies, Group I — Lynn Holly Johnson, Glenview; Junior Ladies, Group II — Sandy Lenz, Rockford; and Juvenile Ladies, 11-12 finals — Lucinda Hamill, Deerfield.

Warriors bomb Bulls

The Golden State Warriors proved too tough for the Chicago Bulls as they coasted to victory in Oakland Thursday night, 98-87.

After the Bulls had pulled to within nine, 68-59, after three quarters with better shooting, the Warriors blitzed Coach Dick Motta's team early in the final period, outscoring the visitors 13-4 to put the game away.

The Bulls were plagued by turnovers and poor shooting in the final half to trail the hosting Warriors 43-30 at intermission. The defending National Basketball Association champs could have blown the visiting Chicagoans off the court in the first half, but they could only hit on 36.5 per cent of their field goal attempts.

Hotshot contest for girls, boys

The National Basketball Association next spring will launch the most extensive youth recreational basketball program ever conducted. It was announced Thursday by NBA commissioner Lawrence F. O'Brien. The program, which will be operated in cooperation with the Pepsi-Cola Company, will be called Pepsi-Cola-NBA Hotshot and is designed for neighborhood playgrounds and recreational sites throughout the country to supplement the on-going youth recreational programs of youth community organizations.

The program will consist of a series of competitive events where youngsters from the ages of 9 through 18 pit their skills against the clock. Competitors will attempt to score as many points as possible in one minute, shooting from spots marked on the court.

Three boys and three girls who emerge as national champions in the competition will receive a $4,000 college scholarship. In addition, trophies and trips to NBA cities will be awarded to other finishers. Every youngster who competes will receive an award.

NCAA rule angers ND's Phelps

An annoyed "Digger" Phelps, coach of the Notre Dame basketball team, lashed out at the NCAA Thursday, claiming that the governing body of collegiate sports acted in haste when it passed a rule last August limiting college basketball traveling squads to 10 players.

Phelps, in New York to promote his team's game with the Russian Olympic champion basketball squad at Madison Square Garden on Nov. 20, said the new rule was supposedly established for economic reasons but would result in destroying the morale of the players.

Jockey quarters goes co-ed

Pimlico Race Course's previously all-male jockey quarters will be made co-ed when the track opens its 1976 season in March. The quarters have been renovated to accommodate female jockeys by sectioning off the men's dressing rooms and installing facilities for the women.

Playoff time again; WWMM at Deerfield

The local interest is gone from the IHSAA Class 5A football playoffs, which will resume Saturday with a pair of semifinal games at Deerfield and Rockford.

Hersey, Schaumburg and St. Viator have all bowed out of the tournament, but that won't detract from the attention focused on Willowbrook (11-0) at Rockford Boylan (10-1) and Loyola Academy (10-1) at Deerfield (11-0). Both semifinal contests will begin at 1:30 p.m. Saturday. The winners will play for the title Nov. 22.

Semifinal games in Classes 4A through 1A will also be played Saturday at sites around the state.

The Class 5A showdowns are likely to be defense-dominated games. Deerfield and Loyola allowed no touchdowns in their quarterfinal games. Willowbrook and Boylan each permitted one score.

The Deerfield-Loyola game will be broadcast live on radio station WWMM-FM (92.7) with the pregame show beginning at 1:20 p.m. WM's sports director Bob Houghton will handle the play-by-play and head football coach Joe Gliwa of Hersey High School will provide the color.

"It should be a helluva game," said Gliwa, whose Huskies lost, 10-3, to Loyola last week. "Loyola's a tough team, physically and psychologically. Deerfield has a good quarterback, they execute well, and they play good defense."

Answer for 'discouraged parent'

(An open letter to the discouraged parent of the Mount Prospect Youth Program)

I have been involved with the youth of America in both California and Illinois for the past 15 years. It was interesting reading the referenced letter because his or her child "never plays." Let's analyze the comments.

I sincerely agree that it's wrong for any coach to tell an athlete that he or she will only play if someone else gets hurt or sick. That type of coach should consider another way of life.

About the (statement) that coaches are always the "father of one of the boys." True! Nobody else would do it. I was originally recruited in spite of the fact that I played ball three nights a week myself.

I took the responsibility and quickly found out I was "all-purpose. I was 1) coach, 2) doctor, 3) baby sitter, 4) delivery boy for "busy parents" (I was never too busy), and 5) even held a party at my expense at year's end for all the boys.

My reward was only that I could help a boy develop his God-given talents. Yes, my boys played — usually catcher — because there weren't too many kids who would go back of the plate (many parents objected here too). None of my boys was a pitcher (the "glory" spot) simply because they weren't good enough. Obviously, somebody else's children must have been getting the glory. It has been my contention that many parents see their athletes through rose-colored glasses — all superstars.

Little league was originally intended to help gifted boys further develop their talents through organization. It was not intended to be equal — is anything really equal?

The best athlete, salesman, doctor, etc. always gets the gold at the end of the rainbow. Don't the better boys have the right to play more? Or should everybody play three innings? If that's the case, eliminate all youth programs and return to the sandlots like most of us did before little league, and then everybody plays six innings or 60 innings. (Even though my kids were involved in little league, they always had time to play in the backyard too.)

With regard to the high schools, I've had four boys compete and none have been mistreated. If they didn't make the team or play enough, it was because they didn't work hard enough or just weren't good enough. My thanks and deepest gratitude to coaches of all the high schools. Theirs is a thankless job too.

Thank God for all the dedicated men and women in coaching. I'm proud my boys are athletes. I hope they expose their sons when that time comes, too.

HUSKIES DID WELL

Fans Forum:

The 1975 Hersey Huskies were all over.

In 1978 there would be new people, a new schedule, a new league, in the end, a new fate based on a new win-loss record. As a team the '75 Huskies had done their best. It was not good enough, but it was better than they had ever done together, better than many had thought them capable of.

And as a team, the Hersey Huskies lost to Loyola Academy, 10-3, in the second round of the state playoffs.

But the '75 Huskies were still champions. They were the best Hersey football team in the school's history. They were the champions of the North Division and the champions of the Mid-Suburban League. They were champions in the hearts of thousands of people across the north suburban area.

And, perhaps most important of all, the '75 Huskies were champions to each other. They had come to believe in and trust each other; to strive valiantly together as a team to reach the high goal of victory. And they had fallen together as a team into the dark pit of defeat. They had spent themselves physically, emotionally and spiritually — together as a team, always straining to the last tick of the clock to reach that high achievement of triumphant victory. This was perhaps their greatest accomplishment as champions.

Next season would bring new faces, new teams, and new glory won for Hersey. But for this splendid group of young men, there would be no next season.

That is the legacy of the '75 Huskies. Name withheld by request

Fogarty fifth in air hockey

Jay Fogarty, a graduate of Fremd High School, represented Southwest State University of Marshall, Minn. in the National Intercollegiate Air Hockey Tournament in New York City last weekend with a solid fifth place finish.

Fogarty won 16 straight games in the best of five set matches before running into the eventual champion and losing a five setter.

"It was tough playing him at 10 in the morning," Fogarty said, "but I can't use that as an excuse. I just think I would have done better playing later in the day."

BACK TO WORK... but at reduced earnings.

You have already received benefits for the period you were totally disabled. But now, what? Your disability restricts activity, cuts down your earnings, and continues to drain savings.

Provident Mutual introduces a new income protection policy embracing a dual concept.

Full policy benefits during periods of total disability AND ALSO sensible blend of partial benefits and limited earned income after you have returned to work on a part-time basis because of a disability's RESIDUAL effects.

There are a lot of other plus factors with this new policy, a hedge against inflation, 10-day approval, an option to purchase more benefits at a future time regardless of the state of your health... and so on. I can explain them almost quicker than you can tap and break a leg!

ALL STAR GAME RESULTS

SOUTH 12, NORTH 8

Anytime the North and South face off and battle, it has to produce a great game for both players and spectators, and this game was no exception. Rolling Meadows High School provided the facilities and the All-Stars provided the excitement, from the opening kickoff to the final whistle, the game remained in doubt as to who would eventually come out on top, with the South proving victorious 12-8. Stars for both sides were many and it was evident that each boy deserved the honor.

The South offensive standouts were the Saints' Brian Clerkin who ran 40 yards on an option pitch from Dan Johnson before being stopped on the one yard line. Second later Brad Rosley hit paydirt for the TD behind the blocking of Tom Sanders. Scott Seely, Mark Hoxan and Dave Mahon. The Saints accounted for both touchdowns as Dan Johnson pitched out to Clerkin who clicked on a 40 yard pass to Pete Walsh for the score. Good blocking by Richard O'Brien, Scott Larson and Dave Ischinger helped.

Other offensive standouts for the South team were Kip Sharp, Bob Moynihan and Tom Olson. Mark McCall did some fine blocking for his day's work.

The defense went to the victory with the entire Glenside team holding the undefeated Varsity League Champions from scoring as time ran out in the last quarter. Other defensive standouts were Mike Hogan, Mike Bonagura, Tim Falk, Pete Walsh, Tom Sadowski, Bob Moynihan, Jim Chabio, Ed Herman, By Mitchell and Scott Grunberg. Jeff Bruns, Matt Arnold and Tim Kirkpatrick also looked good on defense.

Schaumburg

The Schaumburg Crusaders won the 1975 championship of the 12-team Northwest Community Football League. The Crusaders defeated the Schaumburg Cavaliers 27-12. It was the first defeat in 21 games for the 1974 Champions Cavaliers. Early in the opening quarter, QB Gary Prybell hit John Blair with a 10-yard scoring pass to put the Cavaliers on the scoreboard first. Blair struck back in the second quarter with three touchdowns to lead 20-0 at halftime. John Everett accounted for two of the Crusader TD's on drives of 4 and 14 yards. QB Everett threw to Bill Pritts on a 36 yard scoring run. Everett and Mike Hallum each ran for an extra point. The Cavaliers made defensive adjustments at halftime and held off the Crusaders during the scoreless third quarter. In the final period, Cavalier Mark Mollenkopf intercepted a Callahan pass on the Crusader 25 yardline and advanced to the 10. On the next play, Prybell advanced to the 10 yard line and scored a sustained drive and scored a 2 yard pass from Callahan to Pritts. Hallum added the extra point for the final score of the game.

While not scoring Crusader halfback Ron Murray was the top ground gainer of the game with timely runs putting his team in scoring position. Crusaders Drew Ayala (with 12 tackles), Ken Steina, Mike Bonagura, Mark McConnell, Don Murphy, Mike Berg and Joe Anzalone turned in fine defensive performances.

Cavalier defensive standouts were Chad Connell, Andy Smetzer, Mike Murphy and Jeff Grigsby.

Bowling fundamentals

Proper stance is vital

by EARL ANTHONY
Bowler of the Year

In bowling, like most sports, there are certain fundamental elements that are common to the individual style of the many players who appear to have highly differing movements. These individualized styles are built around the basics of the game and usually evolve as a result of personal experimentation to improve control and ultimately bowl a better game.

My style is individualized somewhat because most bowlers are right-handed, and I roll from the left side. While I am a southpaw, for purposes of this series, the instruction will be in right-hand terminology. If you are a left-hander, just substitute right for left, and vice versa, as you read.

As good a place as any to start learning successful bowling technique is with the beginning stance. Position your feet with the left foot on the specific board. This is useful for checking the straightness of your approach at the end of your roll, as we shall see. For i should be next to each other, although you may prefer to move your right foot slightly back.

Exactly how far behind the foul line you should take your stance is one of those things that you have to ascertain by repeated practice. If you seem to be ending your delivery over the foul line, you'll either want to move back a bit for your start, or take shorter steps — whichever seems more natural and comfortable to you.

In any case, you should stand upright and relaxed with shoulders parallel to the foul line. Grip the ball comfortably with the right hand and hold it about waist high, supporting it with the left hand. Your right arm will have to carry and guide the ball during the delivery. Why not let the left hand do some of the work?

Many people find that holding the ball a bit off-center, to the right instead of directly in front of the body, aids in making the arm swing of the delivery straight.

After your stance is established begin your address. The object of the address is to properly set the ball in motion towards the "target." Although bowling's ultimate object is to strike the pins, bowlers usually don't aim for the pins. The target they sight on is usually a specific board or lane marker. The most common, and probably most successful for right-handers, target is the second spot from the right on the lane.

No matter what you determine to be the best target for your game don't take your eyes off it from the time you begin your address until after the ball is released.

Now, put your weight on the right foot, and the ball in a comfortable position between the waist and the shoulders, still supporting it with the left hand. From this position you begin your approach and as you do, the weight of the ball will be transferred to the right hand. The weight of the ball, when released, will provide the necessary momentum to create a pendulum-like arm swing.

Next: THE APPROACH

BEGIN STANCE BY gripping the ball comfortably with bowling hand while supporting its weight with the opposite hand. Stand upright and relaxed, facing straight ahead with shoulders parallel to the foul line.

Pat Haden: passing whiz has different pressures

by ALEX FRERE
UPI Sports Writer

OXFORD, England (UPI)—You had to be good at reading the small print to learn about the collapse of the World Football League in English newspapers. But Pat Haden reads newspapers like he reads defenses and that news meant he was out of a job.

Haden was among the hottest properties the WFL owned. The former USC quarterback was the League's leading passer and star of the Southern Californian Sun.

"When I read it in the newspaper, I wasn't really surprised because there had been a lot of rumors, but I was disappointed," said Haden, who had a six-figure contract with the Sun. "I just went out and played golf to take my mind off it."

Haden is about as far as you can get from the pressures of pro football without actually joining the Capuchin order. He is studying Politics, Philosophy and Economics at Worcester College, Oxford, on a two-year Rhodes scholarship.

Worcester is one of Oxford's "modern" colleges, founded in 1714. Sitting overlooking the college's own lake and its manicured lawns that make Wimbledon's center court look like a ploughed field is as good a place as any to find you've lost your job.

"I'm trying to get away from the whole athletics scene. I need a little room to breathe, somewhere where there is no pressure on me to play football and get good grades," said Haden.

"I had lived in Los Angeles all my life and all my life I've been in contact with the same kind of people. I had to get out. I've come from a very high-pressure educational system to one in which it's all left up to you. You make your own pace and that's great for me."

Haden is not the first American pro athlete to seek two year's haven at Worcester College. New York Knicks star Bill Bradley created quite a stir here a decade ago. But any ripples Haden makes won't be on the sporting scene. U.S. football players are eagerly sought for the rugby team, but Haden's $250,000 insurance policy won't stretch to the rugby field, so he's sticking to tennis, golf and a little volleyball.

Financially, Haden has few worries. His agent in Los Angeles, another small-print expert, can handle what is left of the Sun contract and the Los Angeles Rams picked him as a fifth draft choice in the first place and will be happy to have him, even after a two-year absence.

"He's not worried that he'll get rusty in that time. 'They are right when they say people are born passers. I've been a quarterback for 15 years and I'm not going to lose it in a few months.'"

He beams cheerfully at the thought of his stay at Oxford and some of the pleasures he has already found. "The emphasis on conversation is wonderful. In LA everyone is in such a hurry, there is no time for it."

He says he's feeling no withdrawal symptoms from not playing football — "Sometimes I wonder why I play it at all, it's so insignificant." — But confessed to a nostalgic twinge when he happened to tune in to the USC-Notre Dame game on Armed Forces Radio.

He will get one chance to test his arm, however, even here. Every year the Rhodes scholars in their second year take on the first year scholars in a touch football game.

"Apparently they practice in secret for three weeks and then suddenly tell us the game's the next day. We'll see," said Haden and smiled.

Just when I thought I'd buy a Cutlass Supreme,
I found I could own a Grand Prix for $32 less!

I thought I knew all there was to know about the specialty cars. But when I saw the price on a '76 Grand Prix, I had to think again. It turns out the manufacturer's suggested retail price on '76 Grand Prix with wheel covers and AM radio is actually $32 lower than the m.s.r.p. for a comparably equipped Cutlass Supreme. And with Grand Prix, you get a 350 cu. in. engine, turbo-hydraulic transmission, power disc brakes, power steering and clock at standard equipment. That meant I could afford to choose. And as you can see, I'm very, very cheap.

Trainer wrapped up in his work

by MURRAY OLDERMAN
REDWOOD CITY, CALIF. — (NEA) — When Chuck Krpata finishes wrapping and taping the brawny bodies of the San Francisco 49ers months from now, the amount of elastic and adhesive used would stretch all the way from their home city to rugged Big Sur on the California coast — a distance of 125 miles.

Just for one game, Chuck will use a full mile of 1 1/2-inch tape — 5,280 feet, 1,760 yards.

But that's only a small part of what it takes to minister to half a hundred athletes in the flower of their youth and strength.

The training room of a football team is a mechanical maze marked off by endless spools of tape.

Chuck, like every other trainer in major league football, baseball and basketball, is more than just an applicator of bandages. "We have a closer, more meaningful relationship with the players," he maintains, "than even the coaches."

That's because sometimes he sees them even more. But that relationship, thanks to modern technology, isn't just a soothing squeeze of the muscles, a friendly swat on the butt and a word of encouragement. Chuck can push buttons to reach deep aches and measure muscular responses.

And he can embellish his personal psychology with the knowledge gained from intense schooling which includes a masters degree in physical therapy (the University of Southern California).

None of it (including the schooling) comes cheap. In one training room, the 49ers have rigged up a couple of chairlike contraptions wired to machines. They were not transposed from Sing Sing. They are a cybex (price tag: $6,500) and two orthotrons ($1,200 each), and their function is to measure, by electronic printouts on the cybex which resemble an EKG, muscular strengths and defects revealed by isokinetic exercises with the orthotrons.

"How far along is he?" Coach Dick Nolan will ask Krpata (his name sounds like one of his machines). And Chuck will tell him the defensive back with the hamstring pull is 80 per cent back to normal.

"The cybex has taken the guesswork out of it," says Chuck.

Tests revealed that Norm Sneed, the veteran quarterback who came to the club last year, had a strength deficit in his right knee. They gave him an orthotron to take home for the winter for exercises, and now Sneed says his hinge has never been stronger. So does the cybex.

Also among Chuck's paraphernalia are a combination ultra sound and electric stimulation machine ($750) to apply deep heat to contusions, sprains and strains; a hydrocollator tank for hot towels; three whirlpool baths for strategic immersion; an iontophoresis machine which induces medication through the skin instead of having to inject the patient — trainers are not allowed to inject, and doctors aren't always around; and an ice machine — "one of the most valuable of all," notes Chuck, since it produces 600 pounds of ice every 24 hours, and the 49ers use it all, plus 200 pounds daily which they buy in town.

In one corner stands a mysterious looking, aluminum-plated chest. It is Chuck's specially designed travel kit to take with him to all games, a virtual mobile infirmary. In it are such diverse items as telfa pads, growwrap gauze, adhesive tape (half-inch, 1-inch, 1 1/2-inch), elastic tape (1-2-3-inch), tape cutters, tape adherent, plastic bags, tape remover, plastic casting material, three different sizes of Band Aids, elastic expandable Band Aids, vaseline, foot powders, elastic bandages for wrapping injuries, cast cutters and hypo allergic tape.

An auxiliary trunk also contains knee braces, cervical collars, wrist splints, shoulder immobilizers, arm slings, two pairs of crutches, metal cutters (for face masks) and an emergency stretcher.

Chuck doesn't want to be caught short in any emergency. But all the devices and all the gadgetry bow inevitably to the human factor in a crisis. A few weeks ago a rookie fullback, Wayne Bullock of Notre Dame, crumpled in a scrimmage on a nearby practice field.

Chuck, thirtyish and fit enough to be a player himself, rushed out and immediately determined the player had fractured the tibia of his right leg. He cut off the shoe and sock and, by examination and palpitations, figured out the fibia was also fractured. In one minute, he had an air splint on the limb. In four minutes, a rescue crew from a nearby hospital had arrived. In 20 minutes, Bullock was in the operation room.

There's hope he'll come back to play next season. By which time, Chuck will have paid the tape bill for this season. It comes to $12,000.

THE TWO Junior Misses selected each will receive a $500 scholarship and a chance to compete in the state pageant in late December in Park Ridge. Runner-up and special recognition scholarships also will be awarded.

The pageant is also affiliated with America's Junior Miss Pageant planned for Mobile, Ala., in May. Winners from the 50 states will compete there.

Major sponsors of this year's pageant are Lattot Motor Sales and First Arlington National Bank, Arlington Heights.

Builder seeks extension

Village mulls role if annex deal fails

by BETTY LEE

Buffalo Grove officials are looking at legal ways to "protect the interest of the village" if a preannexation agreement expires on the 28-acre Arrowhead development.

The developer, Chesterfield Development Corp., Deerfield, wants to build 294 townhouse units at the northeast corner of Arlington Heights and Lake-Cook roads. The preannexation agreement between Chesterfield and the village, however, expires Nov. 24, and trustees did not grant a two-year extension recently requested by the firm.

Fred Hillman, executive vice president of Chesterfield, has asked the village board to reconsider the extension, and trustees will decide Monday whether to look at the matter again.

VILLAGE PRES. Edward A. Fabish said if the preannexation agreement expires, "the village will consider action to protect the village's interests." The property would revert to R-9, multiple-family dwelling zoning, the highest density per acre allowed in the village when the agreement was made, if the agreement expires.

Both the developer and village will lose provisions in the preannexation agreement, made in 1969 when the parcel was annexed to Buffalo Grove, Fabish said.

The agreement includes a requirement by the village for Chesterfield to pay an annexation fee of $100 per unit. It also includes a $34,920 cash donation to the Buffalo Grove-Long Grove School Dist. 96 and the installation of sidewalks on the east side of Arlington Heights Road from the development.

Harper bonds tax bills lower than anticipated

The first-year tax payment to pay off the first $6 million in Harper College $12 million referendum bonds will cost homeowners $3.80 per $10,000 assessed valuation next year, slightly less than anticipated by college officials.

As adopted, payments on the 12-year bond retirement schedule begin next spring for taxpayers, said William Mann, vice president for administrative services.

Prior to the Sept. 27 referendum, college officials estimated that the same homeowner would pay $4.42 the first year to retire the bond issue on a 20-year retirement schedule.

Mann said the total Harper tax bill in spring, 1976, will "be about $20 on a home assessed at $10,000." He said the college's original tax rate was about $22 on that same home.

THE 12-YEAR retirement schedule was suggested by bond consultant

Paul D. Speer and Associates to take advantage of the best interest rates available. Mann told the board that interest on a 20-year retirement schedule would "be so high at the beginning of payments that it would, in fact, be a penalty to existing taxpayers."

The $6 million in bonds should be sold and delivered by Dec. 29 for use in building a $3.75 million physical education facility.

Another $2.1 million will be used to purchase the 117-acre site for Harper's second campus at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads in Arlington Heights.

Speer and Associates said the property can be paid for Dec. 30. The remaining $6 million of the bond issue probably will be sold in two, $3-million portions. It is anticipated the first $3 million portion will be sold in 1978.

Schools remain open

Dist. 63 strike into third day

A teachers' strike in East Maine Dist. 63 was expected to enter its third day today despite continuing contract talks late Thursday.

Schools remained open in the district the first two days of the strike, although 88 per cent of the teachers were on picket lines.

Schools will remain open throughout the strike, district officials said.

Both sides say the strike could last through the weekend. Teachers plan to picket again today with little hope that a settlement would be reached Thursday night.

BOARD PRES. Arlene Nidetz said no issues had been resolved by 10:30 p.m. although talks were still in progress.

County School Supt. Richard Martwick was expected to attend negotiations again Thursday to try and mediate the differences. Martwick and John Leigh, a mediator from his office, also caucused with both sides Wednesday, but talks broke off after union negotiators discovered all the board members had left the bargaining table.

Union officials said 304 of the district's 346 teachers were on strike Thursday. They also reported the number of substitutes was down to 179 from 218 the first day.

School Supt. G. Allen Gogo said the union figures were "fairly accurate," although he was not "aware of many substitutes refusing to work."

Student attendance also was down Thursday, according to union figures which showed about 4,300 students in school. Normally about 5,100 of the district's 5,600 students are in class. TEACHERS picketed outside the schools for the second day distributing leaflets to the parents explaining the teacher's positions.

Substitutes, staffing schools during the strike were taunted by regular teachers yelling "scab" when substitutes left school for the day.

Louann White, union vice president, said teachers are "angrier than they were before. They are more determined."

She said more teachers plan to be out today as the strike continues.

Outstanding issues include salaries, fringe benefits and guidelines for staff cuts and transfers.

At a glance...

Issues in East Maine Dist. 63 negotiations:

• Salaries — teachers demand 9 per cent increase; the board is offering 5 per cent. Base pay this year is $8,734.

• Staffing — teachers want seniority basis for staff cuts and transfers while the board says it is administrative prerogative.

• Insurance — Teachers want greater contribution for single and family coverage.

• Personal days — Teachers want three personal days off without approval from administration as currently is the case.

Suit challenges Graham NIPC post

A lawsuit challenging the appointment of F. T. "Mike" Graham to the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission has been filed by Lake County State's Atty. Jack Hoogasian.

The planning commission and 13 members of the Lake County Board who voted for Graham's appointment have been named in the suit. The controversy revolves on the question of when the term of office for the planning commission expires.

The following county board members were named in the suit:

Chairman John Balen, Millicent Berliant, Norman Geary, William Lea, H. Don Morris, Janet Morrison, Bertha Ogrin, Keith Pederson, Mariellen Sabato, Roland Sandee, C. Richard Anderson, George Bell and Graham.

The suit seeks to have Graham ousted as NIPC representative, and seeks to reinstate former NIPC representative Matthew Miholic.

If the suit is successful, the county board would be charged the cost of the suit, "and any other costs the court deems proper," Hoogasian said. Miholic was appointed NIPC representative in 1972 by Ronald Coles, county board chairman of that time.

Balen vacated the post this summer, saying that the term expired with the 1974 elections. Hoogasian's suit alleges that Miholic's term runs until 1977.

Walker takes case to people

'Override means tax increase'

by STEVE BROWN

Gov. Daniel Walker warned again Thursday that if the state Senate votes to override his veto of $116 million in education funds, an increase in taxes is inevitable.

Walker took to the voters his fight to have the vetoes sustained during a five-minute television address telecast throughout the state.

The governor outlined what has become the familiar message that he has increased state funding of education more than $500 million in the past three years and that schools will get $100 million more this year than last even if the vetoes are sustained.

He noted the financial picture in the state is not any better now than it was five months ago when he called for a 6 per cent across-the-board state spending cut. He noted unemployment has increased to more than 10 per cent in Illinois.

HE ALSO NOTED the state has increased its share of education funding from 37 per cent to 48 per cent in the past few years.

Despite the increased funding, Walker said some people are still demanding more.

"I believe with all my heart that the people of this state are spending enough for education and we should not ask the taxpayers to pay more,

especially when it means a tax increase."

Walker said the issue is not favoring increased aid to education, but if the Illinois General Assembly should be allowed to overspend and force a tax hike.

The governor also questioned if the increased state spending has brought about an increase in the quality of education.

"DOES ANYBODY really believe the quality of education has increased as much as the burden on the taxpayers; does anybody really believe that school administrators cannot eliminate waste and put those dollars into the classroom," Walker said.

"If you are against higher taxes, then say no to the override," Walker added.

The speech was part of a stepped up media blitz by Walker. Besides Thursday's speech, which was carried by WMAQ-TV, WLS-TV, WGN-TV and a number of Downstate stations, Walker appeared on several radio talk shows.

The governor made no mention of the compromise school funding proposal suggested Wednesday by a group of eight state senators. They have called for $30 million in funds for schools and a change in the school aid funding formula.

The lawmakers had asked Walker to call a special session of the legislature next week to consider the proposal. The governor has indicated he will take the request under advisement.

Feminists urge woman for top court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House said Thursday President Ford will try to nominate the "best qualified person" to succeed Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas — and feminists, with an ally in Betty Ford, urged him to make that person a woman.

At least one woman — Carla Hills, the secretary of housing and urban development — seemed likely to be among the top candidates. And the names of at least half a dozen others cropped up in Washington speculation over who might become the first female Supreme Court justice.

The First Lady told reporters she had a chat with the President and informed him of her wish that he select a female successor to Douglas, who retired suddenly Wednesday for reasons of health. Asked Ford's reaction, she smiled and said, "We'll see."

"There are so many woman judges who fill the bill," she said, and one of them could be "the best person for the job."

Ford, however, remained strictly noncommittal on the subject of potential nominees.

Other top possibilities appeared to be assistant Senate Republican leader

Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, Judge Arlin Adams of the U.S. 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia — both recommended along with Hills by Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott — and Attorney General Edward Levi.

But the retirement of Douglas for reasons of health Wednesday put Ford in the tricky political position of finding a nominee acceptable to both liberal and conservative politicians — or gamble with one side or the other. Either bloc could try to obstruct the nomination in the Senate and plunge

Village files suit against Bieber

The Village of Wheeling has filed suit against William Bieber, former village building director, and two businessmen for allegedly conspiring to violate village ordinances.

The suit charges Bieber and businessmen Richard Calfa and George Harhen with conspiring to violate village ordinances during construction of an office building at 1111 W. Dundee Rd. in 1971. The village is seeking $50,000 in damages. Calfa, owner of the building, and Harhen are former partners.

Village Atty. John Burke said the suit, filed in Circuit Court, basically contends that the three men "knew the building going up was not in conformity with village ordinances."

Bieber was indicted in 1974 on federal charges of extortion and conspiracy stemming from the shake-down of Wheeling developers. He pleaded guilty to the charges and was sentenced to a one-year prison term.

THE BUILDING has been cited for violation of the village fire ordinance which prohibits frame buildings. Calfa also used the basement for office space, although plans filed with the village have no provisions for a finished basement.

Three village inspectors recently testified the building plans differed from those used to construct the building. They said they informed Bieber of the discrepancy, but he reportedly did nothing about it.

The village ordered Calfa to vacate basement offices because plans to finish the basement for office use were never approved. Calfa later filed suit against the village to overturn the vacation order. The basement offices are occupied by Roper Co.

Earlier this week, the village zoning board granted Calfa's request for a variance from village fire limits.

Real estate firm to donate to Bobby

Robert Verbie, president of AppleGate Realty Inc., Buffalo Grove, has announced the firm will contribute 10 per cent of commission dollars earned between Saturday and Dec. 31 to the Bobby Libit Fund.

Bobby, a 7-year-old Buffalo Grove youth, recently underwent a bone marrow transplant at Children's Hospital, Seattle, Wash. He is now recuperating at home with his family, the Jerome Libits, 626 Raupp Blvd.

Commissions should exceed $1,000 based on AppleGate's recent sales volume, Verbie said.

More than $7,000 has been raised in Buffalo Grove and Wheeling by friends and residents since Bobby entered the hospital in August.

James Duncan

James Duncan has resigned from the Long Grove-Buffalo Grove Dist. 96 Board of Education.

Duncan, who is president of the board, announced his resignation Monday saying he will be moving out of state. His resignation is effective Dec. 1.

The board formed a committee, chaired by board member Thomas Rusk, to seek candidates to fill the vacancy. Residents interested in serving on the board should call Rusk at his home, 438-0083, or Supt. William Hitzeman at the administration center, 634-3074.

The board expects to appoint a candidate to the vacancy when it meets Jan. 12. That person would serve on the board until school elections April 10 and may then become a candidate for the one-year unexpired portion of Duncan's term or for a regular three-year term on the board.

Duncan, a resident of Buffalo Grove, was elected to the board in 1971 and reelected in 1974.

Sex-ed panel meeting Nov. 25

The Dist. 96 sex-education committee will present its philosophical statement on sex education to the community when it meets Nov. 25 at 8 p.m. at Twin Groves School.

The committee has been in contact with local clergy seeking their ideas on sex education and is now asking the community to react to the committee's work.

Twenty-five trees are being purchased for the parkway at Twin Groves School.

The little leaf linden trees are being purchased by Dist. 96 through the Village of Buffalo Grove which has an ordinance stating that all parkways in the village must have trees. Cost of the trees, including planting and a one-year guarantee is $2,000.

Population study planned

The Dist. 96 board is planning a demographic study of the area in cooperation with local municipalities.

Dist. 96 officials are working with two professors from Northern Illinois University who are interested in doing the geographic study, but are waiting for cost estimates before sealing the agreement.

The study will aid officials in predicting the population growth and future wealth of the area.

Office-warehouse delay protested

Developers of a proposed office-warehouse complex Thursday night said they have been "led down the garden path" by Wheeling officials who again delayed action on the project.

Ronald Benrick, owner of the Lexington Development Co., Schaumburg, said he thought his company was "entitled to some action at this meeting."

"We've complied with every request both written and oral. I think we're entitled to a ruling," he said.

COMMISSION MEMBERS said they wanted to delay action on the complex request until they met with Village Atty. John Burke. In a letter to the commission, Burke said he believes the industrial use requested by the developer contradicts the village's comprehensive plan as originally drafted and amended. He recommended that Lexington "be advised and requested to conform its plans to the official plan."

Lexington is seeking to purchase eight-acres west of the village hall for development of the complex. The development would include 28 dock bays to accommodate semi-trailer trucks.

Burke said the original village master plan designated the area for park and recreational use. The village board is now seeking to have the site rezoned in an effort to block industrial development there.

JAMES K. STUCKO, attorney for Lexington Development Co., said the developer was not aware of the current industrial zoning is not in accordance with the village's proposed comprehensive plan now being developed. "We felt we weren't given all the facts. We're three months and a lot of money down the lane and we're now told the zoning doesn't apply," he said.

Plan Commission chairman Anthony Altieri said Stucko was notified of the conflict between the zoning and comprehensive plan at the preliminary hearing on the project.

The commission will discuss the office-warehouse complex at its Nov. 20 meeting at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

opment site to Cooper Junior High School.

Hillman said he sought an extension on the preannexation agreement because his firm has spent approximately $100,000 in professional services to "get the plans to where they are now."

WITHOUT THE extension, the firm must replan the development according to the R-9 zoning and present new plans to the various village commissions and the board for approval, Hillman said. Such a procedure would cost him time and money, he said.

Hillman said he recently requested an extension because of state plans to improve Lake Cook Road. Because of the road project, his firm must redesign the project in order to conform to the improvements.

Hillman also said it will take approximately a year to make the changes in plans and another year to present them to the village and actually begin construction. The village board could not reach a two-thirds vote to grant the extension.

Fabish said it is unclear what will happen if the agreement ends, whether the village must grant the R-9 zoning to Chesterfield. He declined to disclose what legal means the village is considering.

HILLMAN SAID he had no plans in mind in the event extension is denied. The Arrowhead project originally called for the construction of 435 apartment units and a shopping center.

In 1972, Chesterfield dropped the apartment unit and shopping center plan and instead opted to build 284 units of townhouses and a 4-acre commercial area. The plans were approved and a two-year extension on the preannexation agreement was given in light of the change in plans.

An old-fashioned hoe down will also be conducted from 3 to 4 p.m. and there will be a display of antique telephones and household articles.

Zoning board seeks to fill openings

The Buffalo Grove Zoning Board of Appeals is seeking applicants to fill vacancies on the board.

No special experience is needed to apply, except for an interest in serving. Chairman Richard Heinrich said. Members meet the third Thursday of each month. The next meeting is scheduled for 8 p.m. Nov. 20 at the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd.

Persons interested in applying should call the village hall at 537-9884.

Teachers' strike goes to 3rd day

by JUDY JOBBITT

The teachers' strike in East Maine School Dist. 63 today will enter its third day if contract talks Thursday night failed to bring a settlement.

Neither side was optimistic about the settlement, saying the strike probably will last through the weekend.

Schools will remain open today. Parents with questions should contact their local school, administration office at 967-5611 or The Herald at 394-1708.

BOARD PRES Arlene Nidetz said no issues had been resolved by Herald press time although talks were still in progress.

County School Supt. Richard Martwick was expected to attend negotiations again Thursday to try and mediate the differences. Martwick and John Leigh, a mediator from his office also caucused with both sides Wednesday, but talks broke off after union negotiators discovered all the board members had left the bargaining table.

Schools remained open the first two days of the strike although 88 per cent of the faculty was on the picket lines. The district staffed schools with substitute teachers, some from as far away as DeKalb. Substitutes are being paid the fee they would receive in their home districts.

Union officials said 304 of the district's 346 teachers were on strike Thursday. They also reported the number of substitutes was down to 179 from 218 the first day.

School Supt. G. Allen Gogo said the union figures were "fairly accurate," although he was not "aware of many substitutes refusing to work."

Student attendance also was down Thursday, according to union figures which showed about 4,300 students in school. Normally about 5,100 of the district's 5,600 students are in class.

Several parents questioned administrators Thursday about the education their youngsters are receiving during the strike. One parent said she kept her son home because "there is no education going on. All they are doing is playing."

Administrators said substitutes were given lesson plans and program guidelines to continue the regular educational program.

At a glance...

Issues in East Maine Dist. 63 negotiations:

- Salaries — teachers demand 9 per cent increase; the board is offering 5 per cent. Base pay this year is $9,734.

- Staffing — teachers want seniority basis for staff cuts and transfers while the board says it is administrative prerogative.

- Insurance — Teachers want greater contribution for single and family coverage.

- Personal days — Teachers want three personal days off without approval from administration as currently is the case.

schools for the second day distributing leaflets to the parents explaining the teachers' positions. Youngsters called to the picketing teachers and waved signs saying "We want our real teachers back," at several schools.

Substitutes, staffing schools during the strike were taunted by regular teachers yelling "scab" when substitutes left school for the day.

Louann White, union vice president, said teachers are "angrier than they were before. They are more determined."

She said more teachers plan to be out today as the strike continues.

She said that when teachers heard board members left the bargaining table Wednesday despite Martwick's presence "they were incensed."

JOE TAYLOR, Illinois Education Assn. spokesman, said the union "is winning. The enthusiasm and morale among the teachers is growing. We want to settle but the administration's tactics of putting in hired baby-sitters isn't working."

Teachers plan to hold a rally this afternoon and are scheduling meetings with parents to discuss the strike's issues. Parents interested in holding a meeting with the teachers should contact union strike headquarters at 965-5438.

Outstanding issues include salaries, fringe benefits, and guidelines for staff cuts and transfers.

STRIKING TEACHERS in East Maine Dist. 63 confronted substitute teachers as they boarded buses after school on the second day of the strike. Negotiations resumed Thursday night after Wednesday's session failed despite mediation efforts by County School Supt. Richard Martwick. Teachers manned the picket lines while substitutes tried to carry on a normal school day.

Parents want kids back in school

Message is clear — end the strike

by DOROTHY OLIVER

It wasn't your typical neighborhood gathering; the talks never once touched on recipes, fashions, problems at the office or the Bears' miserable season.

The conversation Thursday night in the Maine Township home of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Davis dwelled on the East Maine Dist. 63 teachers' strike and the message from the more than 30 parents packed into the living room came through loud and clear; keep your kids home from school, close the district down and force an end to this intolerable situation.

Although the bulk of the talks was pro-teacher, the basic concern of these parents was for the education of their children.

"As much as I agree or disagree with the teachers' grievances; as much as I agree or disagree with the board's point of view; I don't give a damn," said Norman Welch, a Nathanson School parent. "My main concern is that my daughter should be in school being taught and not sitting there having a bad example set by her teachers, the board, and all the rest."

"IT MAY BE very illogical on my part, but I don't care. My child's education is the most important thing to me."

The parents' meeting Thursday night in the Davis' home was one of several that had been put together all over Dist. 63 to get parents organized, inform them of the issues and possibly prompt some parental pressure that would bring an end to the strike.

Luke Allen, an Oak School teacher and publicity representative of the teachers union, was there and so was Gerry Kuntz, a fourth grade Nathanson teacher and a familiar face for most parents.

Their role was to disseminate information and the task was immense for they were dealing with people, who up until the last few days, were unaware there was trouble brewing in their quiet suburban school district.

ALLEN EXPLAINED the contract issues that are in dispute and parents listened, questioned and argued among themselves as to their validity.

One mother in the crowd said she had been picketing with the teachers since the strike began Wednesday and called on all parents to keep their children home until the district was

Walker takes case to people

'Override means tax increase'

by STEVE BROWN

Gov. Daniel Walker warned again Thursday that if the state Senate votes to override his veto of $116 million in education funds, an increase in taxes is inevitable.

Walker took to the voters his fight to have the vetoes sustained during a five-minute television address telecast throughout the state.

The governor outlined what has become the familiar message that he has increased state funding of education more than $500 million in the past three years and that schools will get $100 million more this year than last even if the vetoes are sustained.

He noted the financial picture in the state is not any better now than it was five months ago when he called for a 6 per cent across-the-board state spending cut. He noted unemployment has increased to more than 10 per cent in Illinois.

HE ALSO NOTED the state has increased its share of education funding from 37 per cent to 48 per cent in the past few years.

Despite the increased funding, Walker said some people are still demanding more.

"I believe with all my heart that the people of this state are spending enough for education and we should not ask the taxpayers to pay more,

especially when it means a tax increase."

Walker said the issue is not favoring increased aid to education, but if the Illinois General Assembly should be allowed to overspend and force a tax hike.

The governor also questioned if the increased state spending has brought about an increase in the quality of education.

"DOES ANYBODY really believe the quality of education has increased as much as the burden on the taxpayers; does anybody really believe that school administrators cannot eliminate waste and put those dollars into the classroom," Walker said.

"If you are against higher taxes, then say no to the override," Walker added.

The speech was part of a stepped up media blitz by Walker. Besides Thursday's speech, which was carried by WMAQ-TV, WLS-TV, WGN-TV and a number of Downstate stations, Walker appeared on several radio talk shows. The governor made no mention of the compromise school funding proposal suggested Wednesday by a group of eight state senators. They have called for $30 million in funds for schools and a change in the school aid funding formula.

The lawmakers had asked Walker to call a special session of the legislature next week to consider the proposal. The governor has indicated he will take the request under advisement.

Feminists urge woman for top court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House said Thursday President Ford will try to nominate the "best qualified person" to succeed Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas — and feminists, with an ally in Betty Ford, urged him to make that person a woman.

At least one woman — Carla Hills, the secretary of housing and urban development — seemed likely to be among the top candidates. And the names of at least half a dozen others cropped up in Washington speculation over who might become the first female Supreme Court justice.

The First Lady told reporters she had a chat with the President and informed him of her wish that he select a female successor to Douglas, who retired suddenly Wednesday for reasons of health. Asked Ford's reaction, she smiled and said, "We'll see."

"There are so many woman judges who fill the bill," she said, and one of them could be "the best person for the job."

Ford, however, remained strictly noncommittal on the subject of potential nominees.

Other top possibilities appeared to be assistant Senate Republican leader

Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, Judge Arlin Adams of the U.S. 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia — both recommended along with Hills by Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott — and Attorney General Edward Levi.

But the retirement of Douglas for reasons of health Wednesday put Ford in the tricky political position of finding a nominee acceptable to both liberal and conservative politicians — or gamble with one side or the other. Either bloc could try to obstruct the nomination in the Senate and plunge

Weller Creek cost overrun causes concern

Several Des Plaines aldermen Thursday night expressed concern about a cost overrun that apparently will require the city to spend an additional $47,500 for the Weller Creek erosion-control project.

The project is a cooperative effort among Des Plaines, Mount Prospect and the Illinois Division of Water Resources.

The Des Plaines City Council water and sewer committee met Thursday night because of an unanticipated overrun that has brought the city's share of the project from $133,557 to about $181,000.

Several aldermen expressed concern because the increase in costs was not brought to the attention of the city council until after the work was completed.

"WE ARE EXTREMELY disappointed in the amount of the overrun," said Thomas Koplos, 1st, chairman of the committee. "It was the committee's intent that once the funds ran out that the project be stopped and the matter brought back to us."

City Engineer Robert Bowen said he did not stop the project because he wanted to ensure work was completed before winter. He also said he did not know until recently the amount of the overrun.

"We had to finish the job," Bowen said. "We couldn't do a half job."

John Gullou, consulting engineer on the project, said most of the increased costs resulted from erosion of the creek banks between the time he prepared a cost estimate in June, 1974 and when the project was started early this year. He said most of the additional money was used for sod and excavation.

Ald. Alan Abrams, 8th, and Ald. Daniel Kisslinger, 5th, said they were disappointed in the cost estimate on the project.

"It would seem to me that you, as a competent engineer should have built some safety factor into your estimate," Kisslinger said.

GULLOU SAID, however, that he had no way of knowing that additional sod and excavation would be needed.

"Had we thought the amount of sod was going to change substantially, we would have told you," he said.

Bowen added, "It's not unusual for you to design drawings to be different from what you find when you get out into the field."

Committee members gave no indication Thursday night on whether they will recommend the city council authorize payment for the overrun.

Mount Prospect officials have said they do not have an estimate on their share of the increased expense. The village has authorized $83,884 for the project. The state contributed $50,000 for the work.

"The phone calls are going on right now — parents calling parents to keep kids home. It's the only way to force the board to settle," she said.

One mother said she kept her children home and got a "threatening" phone call that her child was truant.

Allen said information from the union's legal advisers said that truancy was not grounds for suspension, that a student must be absent three days or more before he is truant and that only the County Superintendent's office has the authority to take action against a truant student.

THE TALK turned to the substitutes that have been bused into the district to keep the schools open, and the two teachers let their feelings come through.

"Our jobs are sitting there and we don't want those people in our classrooms," said Mrs. Kuntz. "If they be there and we could get back to work."

were't there the children would not

Parents said they had heard rumors of nonstriking teachers being assaulted and substitutes using children for shields as they left the schools and went to their buses.

"We would never do anything to hurt those people," said Mrs. Kuntz. "There are words said but our hands are in our pockets."

"Some of the subs have said to our teachers, 'I'll take your job any day even for $100 a week,'" said Allen.

"THEY ARE threatening our job security. If our feelings run high, that's why."

But throughout the night parents returned to the same question: How can we stop this, what can we do.

"If we lived in Chicago, Mayor Daley would come in and settle this," said one lady, half serious.

For Harper College bonds

Tax payments less than estimated

The first-year tax payment to pay off the first $6 million in Harper College $12 million referendum bonds will cost homeowners $3.80 per $10,000 assessed valuation next year, slightly less than anticipated by college officials.

As adopted, payments on the 12-year bond retirement schedule begin next spring for taxpayers, said William Mann, vice president for administrative services.

Prior to the Sept. 27 referendum, college officials estimated that the same homeowner would pay $4.42 the first year to retire the bond issue on a 20-year retirement schedule.

Mann said the total Harper tax bill in spring, 1976, will "be about $20 on a home assessed at $10,000." He said the college's original tax rate was about $22 on that same home.

THE 12-YEAR retirement schedule was suggested by bond consultant Paul D. Speer and Associates to take advantage of the best interest rates available. Mann told the board that interest on a 20-year retirement schedule would "be so high at the beginning of payments that it would, in fact, be a penalty to existing taxpayers."

The $6 million in bonds should be sold and delivered by Dec. 29 for use in building a $3.75 million physical education facility.

Another $2.1 million will be used to purchase the 117-acre site for Harper's second campus at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads in Arlington Heights.

Speer and Associates said the property can be paid for Dec. 30. The remaining $6 million of the bond issue probably will be sold in two, $3-million portions. It is anticipated the first $3 million portion will be sold in 1978.

City studies annex west of Dee Road

Des Plaines officials are looking into the possibility of annexing a 1.75-square-mile section of property west of Dee Road in unincorporated Maine Township.

Michael Richardson, city director of planning and zoning, said officials are considering the annexation because of a recent proposal by Niles Mayor Nicholas Blase. Blase suggested that Niles, Des Plaines and Park Ridge renew efforts to annex the unincorporated areas.

Richardson said, however, that while officials have agreed to look at the area, they have made no commitments.

"The mayor (Herbert H. Behrel) asked me to take a look at it," he said. "I'll get back to him and where it will go from there I don't know."

RICHARDSON SAID he still is in the preliminary stages of his study and has not formed an opinion on whether the annexation of the area would be beneficial to the city.

He said that he is studying population and housing statistics and attempting to determine the assessed valuation of the area under consideration.

"Nobody really knows too much of what's out there," he said. "I'm trying to familiarize myself with the area."

The area being considered by Des Plaines, Richardson said, is bounded by Central Road, Dempster Street, Dee Road and the eastern city limits. He estimates that development of the area in the near future will bring its population to 14,000 and the number of dwelling units to 5,000. The area consists primarily of apartments.

Before any of the unincorporated areas could be annexed by the three municipalities, residents would have to give their approval. The area could not be annexed involuntarily because of its size.

THE PROPOSAL by Blase calls for the annexation of homes and apartments occupied by about 30,000 persons. Unincorporated Maine Township generally is bounded by Dempster Street, Greenwood Avenue, Central Road and the Tri-State Tollway.

Blase said the primary reason for annexation of the area would be to control growth and ensure that existing developments are maintained. He said the county exerts little control over the area and if it is allowed to deteriorate, it could have an adverse effect on surrounding communities.

A similar annexation effort was attempted about six years ago, but was dropped after residents objected. They said the move would have resulted in an increase in property taxes.

Albert Sompolski, president of the Congress of Maine Township Homeowners' Associations, said recently that residents probably still would be hesitant toward annexation by one of the three municipalities. He added, however, that they are willing to review the matter.

RESIDENTS ARE not likely to agree to annexation, he said, unless they can be shown that services will improve enough to justify the addition of a municipal tax to property tax bills.

Sompolski's group consists of 10 to 12 homeowners' organizations in the unincorporated area of the township.

Blase has had preliminary meetings with Des Plaines and Park Ridge officials to discuss his proposal, but no additional meetings are scheduled. The municipalities have not yet met with residents in the unincorporated area.

Kenna charges Smith 'using' homeowners

Elk Grove Village Trustee Edward W. Kenna Jr. has accused Illinois Senate candidate Michael Smith of using unhappy homeowners as a means to getting elected.

Kenna said it was his "personal opinion" that homeowners, such as the three women from the Winston Grove subdivision who complained about their light fixtures, were being used by Smith in his election effort.

Smith, a Democrat, has said he will oppose State Sen. David A. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, for the 3rd District legislature post.

"The Consumer Advocate Office is just a patronage job to ensure reelection of Gov. Walker," Kenna charged.

Smith, until his recent candidacy announcement, had been a consumer coordinator for the Consumer Advocate Office.

THE WOMEN said Smith had advised them to circulate the petition and inform authorities, such as the village, about the problem.

Smith, who was not at the Wednesday village board meeting, Thursday said "Kenna's attitude is poor."

He charged that Kenna was attempting to discourage residents from bringing their complaints to the village board. "I've gotten some vibrations from Wednesday night. The people felt he intimidated them," Smith said.

Falling light fixtures plague Winston Hills

by TOM VON MALDER

Falling light fixtures have plagued more than a dozen homes in the Winston Grove subdivision of Elk Grove Village during the past year, residents of the area have told village officials.

No injuries have been reported from the falling light fixtures, although one woman said she was struck on the head. The fixtures are found in the kitchens and dining rooms of the houses built three years ago by Centex Homes Inc., west of Rohlwing Road and north of Nerge Road.

A petition from residents in the subdivision protesting the situation has been given to village officials. A village inspection is scheduled shortly, said Building Comr. Thomas F. Rettenbacher.

THE FIXTURES were installed by Gibson Electric Co., Rettenbacher said.

Rettenbacher said the village previously received only one complaint about the fixtures, and an investigation found that the threading on the nut and bolt which hold up the glass portion of the fixture had worn away as light bulbs were replaced by the homeowner.

Once worn away, the remaining threads became insufficient to hold up the fixture when the house vibrated, Rettenbacher said.

Karen Wonak, 1057 Carpenter Ct., who filed the lone complaint, said the fixture fell about two months ago.

"It fell on my head," she said Thursday. "Fortunately I wasn't hurt. I got a little glass in my hair but no cuts."

MRS. WONAK SAID the second fixture in her house has been taken down for safety. "We fear some child might get hurt," she added. She said she began circulating a petition in the neighborhood about a month ago.

Twelve other homeowners signed the petition, stating they too had fixtures fall down in their houses.

The petition was sent to the state Consumer Advocate Office at the suggestion of the village.

Motorist nabbed on drug charges

A Bensenville man was in custody Thursday for drug charges after Elk Grove Village police said he was carrying quantities of suspected narcotics following his arrest on a traffic violation.

Robert T. Wells, 19, 419 Mason, was charged with possession of PCP, an animal tranquilizer, and marijuana.

He was arrested after police curbed his auto on the 1800 block of Greenleaf Ave., about 2 a.m. and police searched the auto after becoming suspicious of an empty wine bottle.

About 10 grams of suspected marijuana were found in Wells' pockets during a search and the alleged PCP was discovered in his wallet.

He was also charged with not having a license plate light and making an illegal turn, police said.

Wells is in custody on $2,000 bond pending a Dec. 24 appearance in Elk Grove Circuit Court.

Hospital security program

Patients beware of Mr. Strong

by TOM VON MALDER

The attacker moves in close, his body touching hers. An arm around her shoulder, a shift of weight and the hospital worker is thrown to the floor.

Next, the woman recovers and attacks in turn. The man falls, perhaps too easily.

"We have an understanding," the woman said laughingly of the man at her feet.

"THE PATIENT WON'T have an understanding," said a slightly rebuking Carol Blatteaux, who has helped turn a section of the Alexian Brothers

Medical Center into a roomful of battling bodies.

The 40 or so hospital employees throwing each other about were participating in training sessions for the hospital's "Mr. Strong" security program. The program's aim is the restraint of unruly patients, hospital employees or visitors.

"Step in, turn his body weight, drop your weight and hold his head," said Ms. Blatteaux, further explaining the proper "take-down" method. "Make sure you keep his head up as most often he's a patient and he has enough problems."

David Hall, security head for the Elk Grove Village hospital, said the purpose behind the Mr. Strong program is to restrain a patient, not hurt him. "First you try to talk down the person," he said.

THE NEED FOR the Mr. Strong teams — there are two set teams with eight employees each — is "very, very rare," Hall said. "I may go for two months without a call at all," he said.

When the call comes though, it is transmitted through the hospital's public address system. The Mr. Strong teams or other readily available personnel then respond where needed.

able personnel then respond where needed.

The current program, in which team members, department heads and security personnel are being trained in restraint techniques, is being conducted with the help of the North Suburban Assn. for Health Resources' security department. Two one-hour sessions are being held each Wednesday this month.

The training program may be expanded to other area hospitals. A spokesman said Northwest Community Hospital has inquired about the sessions.

Walker takes case to people

'Override means tax increase'

by STEVE BROWN

Gov. Daniel Walker warned again Thursday that if the state Senate votes to override his veto of $116 million in education funds, an increase in taxes is inevitable.

Walker took to the voters his fight to have the vetoes sustained during a five-minute television address telecast throughout the state.

The governor outlined what has become the familiar message that he has increased state funding of education more than $500 million in the past three years and that schools will get $100 million more this year than last even if the vetoes are sustained.

He noted the financial picture in the state is not any better now than it was five months ago when he called for a 6 per cent across-the-board state spending cut. He noted unemployment has increased to more than 10 per cent in Illinois.

HE ALSO NOTED the state has increased its share of education funding from 37 per cent to 49 per cent in the past few years.

Despite the increased funding, Walker said some people are still demanding more.

"I believe with all my heart that the people of this state are spending enough for education and we should not ask the taxpayers to pay more,

especially when it means a tax increase."

Walker said the issue is not favoring increased aid to education, but if the Illinois General Assembly should be allowed to overspend and force a tax hike.

The governor also questioned if the increased state spending has brought about an increase in the quality of education.

"DOES ANYBODY really believe the quality of education has increased as much as the burden on the taxpayers; does anybody really believe that school administrators cannot eliminate waste and put those dollars into the classroom," Walker said.

"If you are against higher taxes, then say no to the override," Walker added.

The speech was part of a stepped up media blitz by Walker. Besides Thursday's speech, which was carried by WMAQ-TV, WLS-TV, WGN-TV and a number of Downstate stations, Walker appeared on several radio talk shows.

The governor made no mention of the compromise school funding proposal suggested Wednesday by a group of eight state senators. They have called for $30 million in funds for schools and a change in the school aid funding formula.

The lawmakers had asked Walker to call a special session of the legislature next week to consider the proposal. The governor has indicated he will take the request under advisement.

Feminists urge woman for top court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House said Thursday President Ford will try to nominate the "best qualified person" to succeed Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas — and feminists, with an ally in Betty Ford, urged him to make that person a woman.

At least one woman — Carla Hills, the secretary of housing and urban development — seemed likely to be among the top candidates. And the names of at least half a dozen others cropped up in Washington speculation over who might become the first female Supreme Court justice.

The First Lady told reporters she had a chat with the President and informed him of her wish that he select a female successor to Douglas, who retired suddenly Wednesday for reasons of health. Asked Ford's reaction, she smiled and said, "We'll see."

"There are so many women judges who fill the bill," she said, and one of them could be "the best person for the job."

Ford, however, remained strictly noncommittal on the subject of potential nominees.

Other top possibilities appeared to be assistant Senate Republican leader

Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, Judge Arlin Adams of the U.S. 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia — both recommended along with Hills by Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott — and Attorney General Edward Levi.

But the retirement of Douglas for reasons of health Wednesday put Ford in the tricky political position of finding a nominee acceptable to both liberal and conservative politicians — or gamble with one side or the other. Either bloc could try to obstruct the nomination in the Senate and plunge

To Lynn and Gloria Allison

Big bands more than a memory

by DIANE MERMIGAS

The big bands of the 1940s and 1950s provided the brassy, sassy sounds that brought people together on the dance floor and helped to keep them sane during the trying days of World War II.

For one Elk Grove Village couple, the music of the big bands became a way of life and a joint venture. It brought them a wealth of friends and professional acquaintances whose names have become part of the history of that musical era.

Lynn and Gloria Allison talk thoughtfully of those people and days that are captured in glossy photographs, marked sheet music, worn concert programs and tape-recorded performances that have been given a special place in their home.

THE ALLISONS WERE Chicagoans looking for that first show business break when they met at the Congress Hotel for an audition with a band in 1943. A few days later they were married.

"That's the way our life always was — fast and interesting, filled with music and people and places to go," Mrs. Allison said.

She was a vocalist who got her start when she was 17 years old and a clerk at the cookie counter in the downtown Goldblatt's Department Store.

"A boy took me on a date to a barbecue place on the south side where they passed around the microphone and patrons would sing for their supper. I had never sung in public before, but always enjoyed singing. I just belted out a song," she said.

"The owner came over to me, said I was good and asked me to sing on the weekends. I never had taken lessons and was always the bashful type, but I agreed to do it, and that's what started me off," Mrs. Allison said.

IT WAS JUST LIKE the way things happen in the old Claudette Colbert movies.

Soon she was singing in major cities and clubs throughout the country with bands like those of Hal McIntyre, Johnny Skat Davis and Gene Krupa. Then, she was billed as Gloria Van.

Lynn Allison had less of a startling launch into the big band circuit, but enjoyed an equal amount of success in live and radio performances.

His interest in the world of show business came as no surprise to his family since his sister, Fran Allison, had already begun a successful entertainment career with two hand puppets, Kukla and Ollie.

"I started taking lessons on the clarinet when I was a kid in school. Eventually, I became more interested in the saxophone, which is what I played in most of the bands," Allison said.

MOST OF HIS professional career during the war years was spent as a member of the Glenn Miller Band in this country and while entertaining American troops in Europe.

Allison was with Glenn Miller one early December morning in 1944 just before Miller boarded an airplane at a London airport, bound for Paris, France.

The plane crashed over the English Channel shortly after take-off, and Miller's body was never recovered from the wreckage.

"I just happened to see him off at the airport that day, never knowing it would turn out to be such a tragic flight. All of the guys in the band and everyone in America and even in Europe were sick over his death," Allison said.

Miller, a man who Allison remembers affectionately as "a true artist" and "a perfectionist," took his wartime, 40-piece band through performances before as many as 60,000 GI's while bombers buzzed overhead, and command performances before the Queen of England and other European royalty.

AFTER THE WAR, the Allisons formed a band of their own, Gloria Van and the Vanguarders, which did a regular spot on WBBM (CBS) radio and made guest appearances on some of television's first variety shows.

Working with Hollywood's biggest stars on the Jack Parr Show, the Courtesy House, the Tin Pan Alley Show and Danny O'Neil and the Jays Potato Chip Show became part of the couple's everyday, but never routine work.

"It was such a thrill and honor to have the back-up of a 15-piece band, and working with professionals who were the best in their field," Mrs. Allison said.

But, the on-the-road schedules after the war became difficult to handle while raising a family, so the Allisons settled into a more accommodating way of life in the northwest suburbs.

Today, Allison is a salesman for the Crawford's Department Store in Rolling Meadows and Mrs. Allison is a receptionist for Kemper Insurance.

OCCASIONALLY, THEY perform with visiting artists from that big band era who are making sentimental tours cross country. Most of the audiences are people who remember dancing to the music that has become legend for new generations.

"Today, young people aren't really interested in big band music. Our children are beginning to appreciate what we used to do, but today they have their own music," Allison said.

"Nothing will ever replace the music of the big bands, and I don't think it will ever be revived. It is hard to describe, but it was a special sound that was created by certain musicians, composers and vocalists who just happened to live at the same time," he said.

"But, a lot of those people are gone now. The music is on the records, and that's probably where it will stay."

GLORIA ALLISON flips through a book of black and white glossy photographs of herself and her husband, Lynn, as they performed during the 1940's and 50's with some of the biggest brass bands of that time. Today, they have settled into a less hectic life.

Schools remain open

Dist. 63 strike into third day

A teachers' strike in East Maine Dist. 63 was expected to enter its third day today despite continuing contract talks late Thursday.

Schools remained open in the district the first two days of the strike, although 88 per cent of the teachers were on picket lines.

Schools will remain open throughout the strike, district officials said.

Both sides say the strike could last through the weekend. Teachers plan to picket again today with little hope that a settlement would be reached Thursday night.

BOARD PRES. Arlene Nidetz said no issues had been resolved by 10:30 p.m. although talks were still in progress.

County School Supt. Richard Martwick was expected to attend negotiations again Thursday to try and mediate the differences. Martwick and John Leigh, a mediator from his office, also caucused with both sides Wednesday, but talks broke off after union negotiators discovered all the board members had left the bargaining table.

Union officials said 304 of the district's 346 teachers were on strike Thursday. They also reported the number of substitutes was down to 179 from 218 the first day.

School Supt. G. Allen Gogo said the union figures were "fairly accurate," although he was not "aware of many substitutes refusing to work."

Student attendance also was down Thursday, according to union figures which showed about 4,300 students in school. Normally about 5,100 of the district's 5,600 students are in class.

TEACHERS picketed outside the schools for the second day distributing leaflets to the parents explaining the teacher's positions.

Substitutes, staffing schools during the strike were taunted by regular teachers yelling "scab" when substitutes left school for the day.

Louann White, union vice president, said teachers are "angrier than they were before. They are more determined."

She said more teachers plan to be out today as the strike continues.

At a glance...

Issues in East Maine Dist. 63 negotiations:

- Salaries — teachers demand 9 per cent increase; the board is offering 5 per cent. Base pay this year is $8,734

- Staffing — teachers want seniority basis for staff cuts and transfers while the board says it is administrative prerogative.

- Insurance — Teachers want greater contribution for single and family coverage.

- Personal days — Teachers want three personal days off without approval from administration as currently is the case.

Outstanding issues include salaries, fringe benefits and guidelines for staff cuts and transfers.

YMCA fund drive aimed at local businesses

Twinbrook YMCA's fund-raising effort aimed at businessmen and professionals will begin with a noon luncheon Wednesday at the Lancer Steak House restaurant, 50 E. Algonquin Rd.

The total Family Building Campaign goal is $360,000 and will be used to construct a YMCA Family Center on Wise Road property in Schaumburg owned by the YMCA, said Larry Romito, section chairman.

YMCA officials hope to break ground for the facility in 1976 in the first phase of a proposed $2.5 million YMCA complex.

Romito said businesses and professional persons will be solicited in the Twinbrook YMCA service area which includes Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Hanover Park, Roselle, Melrose, Bloomingdale, Keeneyville, Elk Grove Village and parts of Rolling Meadows, Itasca and Streamwood.

"The campaign staff is headed by recognized business leaders, whose concern for the community well-being through the spirit of the YMCA is gratifying. The enthusiasm being generated ensures us that the $260,000 goal will be met," Romito said.

Romito said campaigners will attend weekly report meetings scheduled for Nov. 26 and Dec. 3, 10 and 17, when a victory dinner will be held.

"Each of our campaigners has made a significant financial pledge to the campaign. They are business oriented and recognize a good investment. We are certain that the general business community will also recognize that investment opportunity," Romito said.

Village OKs stop signs at Bianco, Crest corner

The Elk Grove Village Board Wednesday approved the installation of stop signs at the intersection of Bianco Drive and Crest Avenue.

The unanimous decision came despite a police department report that traffic and accident rates at the intersection do not warrant the stop sign.

"I have driven there many times and I'd rather see one up, rather than not," said Trustee Ronald L. Chernick, who said the signs would be worth it if they "save one life."

TRUSTEE MICHAEL A. Tosto said several residents of the area had expressed their concern to him over the many "near-miss" accidents at the intersection.

In another traffic matter, the board delayed any decision on a police department recommendation for a pedestrian-activated cross signal at Landmeier and Wildwood roads.

The board requested cost studies for the proposed pedestrian-activated signal and for signals at the Landmeier and Torne roads intersection, which is a half-block farther east. The board's consensus was one or the other of the two projects would be undertaken.

Mary Hopkins School and several churches are in the area of the two intersections.

Harper bonds tax bills lower than anticipated

The first-year tax payment to pay off the first $6 million in Harper College $12 million referendum bonds will cost homeowners $3.80 per $10,000 assessed valuation next year, slightly less than anticipated by college officials.

As adopted, payments on the 12-year bond retirement schedule begin next spring for taxpayers, said William Mann, vice president for administrative services.

Prior to the Sept. 27 referendum, college officials estimated that the same homeowner would pay $4.42 the first year to retire the bond issue on a 20-year retirement schedule.

Mann said the total Harper tax bill in spring, 1976, will "be about $20 on a home assessed at $10,000." He said the college's original tax rate was about $22 on that same home.

THE 12-YEAR retirement schedule was suggested by bond consultant

Paul D. Speer and Associates to take advantage of the best interest rates available. Mann told the board that interest on a 20-year retirement schedule would "be so high at the beginning of payments that it would, in fact, be a penalty to existing taxpayers."

The $6 million in bonds should be sold and delivered by Dec. 29 for use in building a $3.75 million physical education facility.

Another $2.1 million will be used to purchase the 117-acre site for Harper's second campus at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads in Arlington Heights.

Speer and Associates said the property can be paid for Dec. 30. The remaining $6 million of the bond issue probably will be sold in two, $3-million portions. It is anticipated the first $3 million portion will be sold in 1978.

Falling fixtures plague homes in Winston Grove

gestion of Michael Smith, then consumer coordinator and an Elk Grove Village resident.

"It's dangerous. My child could have been blinded," said Veronica Bevis, 1050 Carpenter Ct., one of three women who brought the problem to the attention of village officials.

"My 5-year-old was sitting at the table Tuesday when the glass fixture fell and shattered," Mrs. Bevis said. "It threw glass everywhere. It was amazing he wasn't scratched."

ANOTHER WOMAN who had a fixture almost hit her child two months ago, said she wants at least some kind of warning issued so that no one gets hurt in the future.

"I'm not putting it back up. It's been bare-bulb for two months," said Kathy Vinson, 940 Casper Ct. She, too, spoke to the village board this week.

Rettenbacher said his department will check the light fixtures in all the residences listed on the petition. He said it should be done within two weeks.

The fixtures were acceptable at time of installation and had the Underwriters Laboratory seal, Rettenbacher said. He added he hopes to obtain one of the fixtures so it can be sent to Underwriters Laboratory in Northbrook for inspection and possible changing of the equipment's standards.

He said the testing may determine if similar fixtures also might develop the defect and fall.

Centex's spokesman, Steve Billheimer, will be unavailable for comment until next week.

TWINBROOK YMCA will begin its annual fund drive Nov. 19. This year's goal is $360,000 which will be used to build this family center on Wise Road. The project is the first phase of a $2.5 million complex. Pledges will be paid over two years.

Short funds for building in Dist. 54?

Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 may fall as much as $5 million short of funds needed to complete previously planned school construction projects.

Marvin Lapicola, Dist. 54 business manager, told board of education members Thursday night the district would now need at least $3.7 million and possibly $5 million if projects originally planned in 1973 to be financed by a $16.5 million 1974 bond issue are to be completed.

Lapicola blamed inflation for increasing the cost of the project but said additional state money might reduce the deficit from $5 million to $3.7 million.

DIST. 54 TAXPAYERS approved the bond issue in February 1974 to renovate eight schools, build 10 new facilities, an administration center and four additions to schools.

Lapicola said the $3 million to $5 million will probably be raised through the sale of bonds, and the tax rate in the district is expected to remain fairly stable.

"As we add on debts, we also retire some debts. And there are constantly more taxpayers to pay the bill," Lapicola said, noting that the district is a growing one.

Board member Edward Bedard said the fact that the district does not now have the funds to construct all the planned projects means that some of them might not be built.

"Maybe we would not build two of the new schools," Bedard said. "But if we find out that we will need them, then we will have to ask for another referendum."

LAPICOLA SAID inflation caused the cost of the projects to rise much higher than had been expected. He said the $16.5 million asked for in the bond issue included an inflation factor, but actual inflation was much higher.

"For example, in June 1972, bids were awarded for (Adolph) Link School at $20.18 per square foot. In June 1974, bids were awarded for Adlai Stevenson School, which is similar in size at $31.67 per square foot. This is an increase of 56.9 per cent, representing a total of $534,583," Lapicola said.

The board met in a committee-of-the-whole session at Hanover Highlands School in Hanover Park in the first of a series of committee meetings to be held at schools throughout the district.

DETECTIVE TROTTER, played by Steve Styers, ponders the latest clue in the Agatha Christie mystery, "Mousetrap," as potential murderers Laurie Gould and Rick Burkhart eye him anxiously. The play will be presented Friday and Saturday at Conant High School.

Commission seeking data on housing plan

Data on rental costs, utility allowances and housing vacancies in Elk Grove Village are being compiled by the village housing commission for preparation of a local housing assistance plan.

The information is necessary to determine long-range goals for low- and moderate-income housing in the village.

Cathy Duoba, commission chairman, said Thursday the information-gathering process will take time because Elk Grove statistics in the 1970 census, the source for most of the housing information, are in error. Statistics in the census are 7 per cent higher than actual population and income, she said.

THE VILLAGE HAS conducted two special censuses since 1970, but those calculated only population and not income levels and other information needed by the housing commission, Mrs. Duoba said.

Henry Zuba of the Regional Housing Coalition has been working with the commission to prepare updated information, she added.

Zuba appeared before the commission Wednesday.

The housing assistance plan is being prepared so the village rather than the federal government can determine and regulate local low and moderate income housing.

A committee meeting for commission members will be held Dec. 3 to review data compiled to date, Mrs. Duoba said. The next regular meeting of the commission will be Dec. 10.

Building cash shortage in Dist. 54?

Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 may fall as much as $5 million short of funds needed to complete previously planned school construction projects.

Marvin Lopicola, Dist. 54 business manager, told board of education members Thursday night the district would now need at least $3.7 million and possibly $5 million if projects originally planned in 1973 to be financed by a $16.6 million 1974 bond issue are to be completed.

Lopicola blamed inflation for increasing the cost of the project but said additional state money might reduce the deficit from $5 million to $3.7 million.

DIST. 54 TAXPAYERS approved the bond issue in February 1974 to renovate eight schools, build 10 new facilities, an administration center and four additions to schools.

Lopicola said the $3 million to $5 million will probably be raised through the sale of bonds, and the tax rate in the district is expected to remain fairly stable.

"As we add on debts, we also retire some debts. And there are constantly more taxpayers to pay the bill," Lopicola said, noting that the district is a growing one.

Board member Edward Bedard said the fact that the district does not now have the funds to construct all the planned projects means that some of them might not be built.

"Maybe we would not build two of the new schools," Bedard said. "But if we find out that we will need them, then we will have to ask for another referendum."

LAPICOLA SAID inflation caused the cost of the projects to rise much higher than had been expected. He said the $16.6 million asked for in the bond issue included an inflation factor, but actual inflation was much higher.

"For example, in June 1972, bids were awarded for (Adolph) Link School at $20.18 per square foot. In June 1974, bids were awarded for Adlai Stevenson School, which is similar in size at $31.67 per square foot. This is an increase of 56.9 per cent, representing a total of $534,583," Lopicola said.

The board met in a committee-of-the-whole session at Hanover Highlands School in Hanover Park in the first of a series of committee meetings to be held at schools throughout the district.

Youth, 15, nabbed for 3 burglaries

Hoffman Estates police arrested a local youth Wednesday night for three burglaries since July in a residential area near Higgins and Roselle roads, police said.

The 15-year-old youth was arrested after police found him with a BB gun believed stolen in one of the break-ins, police said.

The juvenile was released to the custody of his parents pending action by the police department's juvenile bureau.

Harper bonds tax less than estimated

The first-year tax payment to pay off the first $8 million in Harper College $12 million referendum bonds will cost homeowners $3.80 per $10,000 assessed valuation next year, slightly less than anticipated by college officials.

As adopted, payments on the 12-year bond retirement schedule begin next spring for taxpayers, said William Mann, vice president for administrative services.

Prior to the Sept. 27 referendum, college officials estimated that the same homeowner would pay $4.42 the first year to retire the bond issue on a 20-year retirement schedule.

Mann said the total Harper tax bill in spring, 1976, will "be about $20 on a home assessed at $10,000." He said the college's original tax rate was about $22 on that same home.

THE 12-YEAR retirement schedule was suggested by bond consultant Paul D. Speer and Associates to take advantage of the best interest rates available. Mann told the board that interest on a 20-year retirement schedule would "be so high at the beginning of payments that it would, in fact, be a penalty to existing taxpayers."

TWINBROOK YMCA will begin its annual fund drive Nov. 19. This year's goal is

$360,000 which will be used to build this family center on Wise Road. The project is the first phase of a $2.5 million complex. Pledges will be paid over two years.

Kickoff luncheon Wednesday

Twinbrook Y begins fund drive

Twinbrook YMCA's fund-raising effort aimed at businessmen and professionals will begin with a noon luncheon Wednesday at the Lancer Steak House restaurant, 50 E. Algonquin Rd.

The total Family Building Campaign goal is $360,000 and will be used to construct a YMCA Family Center on Wise Road property in Schaumburg owned by the YMCA, said Larry Romito, section chairman.

YMCA officials hope to break ground for the facility in 1976 in the first phase of a proposed $2.5 million YMCA complex.

Romito said businesses and professional persons will be solicited in the Twinbrook YMCA service area which includes Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Hanover Park, Roselle, Medinah, Bloomingdale, Keeneyville, Elk Grove Village and parts of Rolling Meadows, Itasca and Streamwood.

"The campaign staff is headed by recognized business leaders, whose concern for the community well-being through the spirit of the YMCA is gratifying. The enthusiasm being generated ensures us that the $260,000 goal will be met," Romito said.

Romito said campaigners will attend weekly report meetings scheduled for Nov. 26 and Dec. 3, 10 and 17, when a victory dinner will be held.

"Each of our campaigners has made a significant financial pledge to the campaign. They are business oriented and recognize a good investment. We are certain that the general business community will also recognize that investment opportunity," Romito said.

Driver union request to panel

Board members in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 Wednesday referred to committee a second request by district bus drivers to have their union recognized for collective bargaining purposes.

Everett Charlier, board member and transportation committee chairman, asked that the district study the cost difference between operating a district bus service and contracting for buses from a commercial carrier.

Dist. 15 operates about 60 buses with a staff of more than 70 drivers, a full garage and maintenance staff. The district has budgeted $674,446 to operate its transportation program this year.

DIST. 15 IS one of the few northwest suburban school districts that operate its own bus service. High school Dist. 211 and River Trails Dist. 26 also own and operate their own bus lines.

Charlier said his request for a cost study on bus service was not prompted by the drivers' request for union recognition. No cost survey had been done during his tenure on the board, he said, and it was time one was done. He said he had thought about requesting the survey before the drivers asked for union recognition.

Joseph O'Brien, spokesman for the bus drivers, attended the board meeting Wednesday but made no comment when the request for recognition was sent to the transportation committee. He said he had brought a petition, supporting the drivers' union, which was signed by 40 of the approximately 70 district bus drivers. O'Brien said he would give it to the board if they requested it.

THIS IS THE second time this year the bus drivers have attempted to unionize. They organized into an independent union in the spring, seeking to negotiate their 1975-76 salaries and

Walker takes case to people

'Override means tax increase'

by STEVE BROWN

Gov. Daniel Walker warned again Thursday that if the state Senate votes to override his veto of $116 million in education funds, an increase in taxes is inevitable.

Walker took to the voters his fight to have the vetoes sustained during a five-minute television address telecast throughout the state.

The governor outlined what has become the familiar message that he has increased state funding of education more than $500 million in the past three years and that schools will get $100 million more this year than last even if the vetoes are sustained.

He noted the financial picture in the state is not any better now than it was five months ago when he called for a 6 per cent across-the-board state spending cut. He noted unemployment has increased to more than 10 per cent in Illinois.

HE ALSO NOTED the state has increased its share of education funding from 37 per cent to 43 per cent in the past few years.

Despite the increased funding, Walker said some people are still demanding more.

"I believe with all my heart that the people of this state are spending enough for education and we should not ask the taxpayers to pay more,

especially when it means a tax increase."

Walker said the issue is not favoring increased aid to education, but if the Illinois General Assembly should be allowed to overspend and force a tax hike.

The governor also questioned if the increased state spending has brought about an increase in the quality of education.

"DOES ANYBODY really believe the quality of education has increased as much as the burden on the taxpayers; does anybody really believe that school administrators cannot eliminate waste and put those dollars into the classroom," Walker said.

"If you are against higher taxes, then say no to the override," Walker added.

The speech was part of a stepped-up media blitz by Walker. Besides Thursday's speech, which was carried by WMAQ-TV, WLS-TV, WGN-TV and a number of Downstate stations, Walker appeared on several radio talk shows.

The governor made no mention of the compromise school funding proposal suggested Wednesday by a group of eight state senators. They have called for $30 million in funds for schools and a change in the school aid funding formula.

The lawmakers had asked Walker to call a special session of the legislature next week to consider the proposal. The governor has indicated he will take the request under advisement.

Feminists urge woman for top court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House said Thursday President Ford will try to nominate the "best qualified person" to succeed Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas — and feminists, with an ally in Betty Ford, urged him to make that person a woman.

At least one woman — Carla Hills, the secretary of housing and urban development — seemed likely to be among the top candidates. And the names of at least half a dozen others cropped up in Washington speculation over who might become the first female Supreme Court justice.

The First Lady told reporters she had a chat with the President and informed him of her wish that he select a female successor to Douglas, who retired suddenly Wednesday for reasons of health. Asked Ford's reaction, she smiled and said, "We'll see."

"There are so many woman judges who fill the bill," she said, and one of them could be "the best person for the job."

Ford, however, remained strictly noncommittal on the subject of potential nominees.

Other top possibilities appeared to be assistant Senate Republican leader

Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, Judge Arlin Adams of the U.S. 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia — both recommended along with Hills by Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott — and Attorney General Edward Levi.

But the retirement of Douglas for reasons of health Wednesday put Ford in the tricky political position of finding a nominee acceptable to both liberal and conservative politicians — or gamble with one side or the other. Either bloc could try to obstruct the nomination in the Senate and plunge

Dist. 63 teacher strike in third day; schools open

A teachers' strike in East Maine Dist. 63 was expected to enter its third day today despite continuing contract talks late Thursday.

Schools remained open in the district the first two days of the strike, although 88 per cent of the teachers were on picket lines.

Schools will remain open throughout the strike, district officials said.

Both sides say the strike could last through the weekend. Teachers plan to picket again today with little hope that a settlement would be reached Thursday night.

BOARD PRES. Arlene Nidetz said no issues had been resolved by 10:30 p.m. although talks were still in progress.

County School Supt. Richard Martwick was expected to attend negotiations again Thursday to try and mediate the differences. Martwick and John Leigh, a mediator from his office, also caucused with both sides Wednesday, but talks broke off after union negotiators discovered all the board members had left the bargaining table.

Union officials said 304 of the district's 346 teachers were on strike Thursday. They also reported the number of substitutes was down to 179 from 218 the first day.

School Supt. G. Allen Gogo said the union figures were "fairly accurate," although he was not "aware of many substitutes refusing to work."

Student attendance also was down Thursday, according to union figures which showed about 4,300 students in school. Normally about 5,100 of the district's 5,600 students are in class.

TEACHERS picketed outside the schools for the second day distributing leaflets to the parents explaining the teacher's positions.

Substitutes, staffing schools during the strike were taunted by regular teachers yelling "scab" when substitutes left school for the day.

Louann White, union vice president, said teachers are "angrier than they were before. They are more determined."

At a glance...

Issues in East Maine Dist. 63 negotiations:

- Salaries — teachers demand 9 per cent increase; the board is offering 5 per cent. Base pay this year is $8,734
- Staffing — teachers want seniority basis for staff cuts and transfers while the board says it is administrative prerogative.
- Insurance — Teachers want greater contribution for single and family coverage.
- Personal days — Teachers want three personal days off without approval from administration as currently is the case.

She said more teachers plan to be out today as the strike continues.

Outstanding issues include salaries, fringe benefits and guidelines for staff cuts and transfers.

New bus driver union request to panel

working conditions with the board.

But the board passed its own salary and benefit schedule in July, asking the drivers to deal with administrators when they had future requests.

Last month, drivers decided to continue to seek union recognition, this time affiliating with the Illinois Education Assn. The IEA is the state-wide teachers union which also backs union of other school personnel. About 20 drivers have taken out formal membership in the new Dist. 15 IEA Bus Drivers' Assn.

Couple faces more games center delays

Another "tilt" action by Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland J. Meyer may again delay a Rolling Meadows couple who are seeking city permission to open an electronic games center.

William and Sheila Abraham, 4406 Hawthorn Ln., have been attempting for several months to obtain city zoning and licensing to operate a teen amusement center in the city's downtown business district.

They now face several months of further delay because they do not have a specific location planned for the facility.

ALTHOUGH A special-use zoning category, that would allow the games business, has been established, the couple cannot apply for it because they have not rented nor own a specific business location, Meyer said. Meyer recently vetoed ordinances passed by the city council that would have provided both zoning and licensing for the center.

The city council subsequently passed an amendment to the zoning ordinance that allows games centers as a special use in a commercial district, circumventing Meyer's veto when an override attempt failed.

Meyer, this week, rejected the Abrahams' petition asking for a special zoning use hearing date. The mayor said that according to city statute such requests must come from the property owners or his agents.

MRS. ABRAHAM said she has no rental commitments but is attempting to find a rental space in the Coachlight Shopping Center on Kirchhoff Road near Owl Drive.

"We are really in a fix and the mayor's actions have been just one more setback in our efforts to operate a place for young people of this city," she said.

Mrs. Abraham said the months of delay, during which the council and Meyer first argued over the ordinances, are responsible for the loss of three possible sites for the games center.

"We are not going to give up, and will keep on looking for a place in the downtown area to rent," she said.

Paper, glass recycled Saturday

Newspapers and glass will be accepted from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday at the Rolling Meadows recycling center at the public works building parking lot, 3200 Central Rd.

Evelyn Drummond, chairman of the Recycling, Ecology and Beautification Committee said members of the St. Colette's Women's Club will act as volunteers to man the center.

The center accepts newspapers that are bagged in paper bags or tied with twine. Glass must be separated by color and foil caps, rings or labels should be removed.

Volunteers who operate the center will unload newspapers or glass from cars.

Mrs. Drummond said a different civic group, club or organization, offers its volunteer help to run the center each operating day.

LEARNING games fascinate children at a Clearbrook Center's day care class, Rolling Meadows.

Clearbrook Center, a school for retarded and handicapped children, receives a large measure of support from the United Fund and the Crusade of Mercy.

For Harper College bonds

Tax payments less than estimated

The first-year tax payment to pay off the first $6 million in Harper College $12 million referendum bonds will cost homeowners $3.80 per $10,000 assessed valuation next year, slightly less than anticipated by college officials.

As adopted, payments on the 12-year bond retirement schedule begin next spring for taxpayers, said William Mann, vice president for administrative services.

Prior to the Sept. 27 referendum, college officials estimated that the same homeowner would pay $4.42 the first year to retire the bond issue on a 20-year retirement schedule.

Mann said the total Harper tax bill in spring, 1976, will "be about $20 on a home assessed at $10,000." He said the college's original tax rate was about $22 on that same home.

THE 12-YEAR retirement schedule was suggested by bond consultant Paul D. Speer and Associates to take advantage of the best interest rates available. Mann told the board that interest on a 20-year retirement schedule would "be so high at the beginning of payments that it would, in fact, be a penalty to existing taxpayers."

The $6 million in bonds should be sold and delivered by Dec. 29 for use in building a $3.75 million physical education facility.

Another $2.1 million will be used to purchase the 117-acre site for Harper's second campus at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads in Arlington Heights.

Speer and Associates said the property can be paid for Dec. 30. The remaining $6 million of the bond issue probably will be sold in two, $3-million portions. It is anticipated the first $3 million portion will be sold in 1978.

City OKs $25,000 for library

The Rolling Meadows City Council Tuesday agreed to pay the library $25,000 promised by the city nearly two years ago.

The transfer of funds approved by the council will prevent some cutbacks by the library.

The library board prepares an annual budget and authorizes expenses, but its finances are administered by the city.

According to Ald. Fredrick Jacobson, 5th, the library board only recently discovered the $25,000 transfer of funds was not made, even though the library has already allocated the money for expenses.

The city will transfer $5,000 from the general fund to the library in December, $10,000 in January and $10,000 in February.

Walker takes case to people

'Override means tax increase'

by STEVE BROWN

Gov. Daniel Walker warned again Thursday that if the state Senate votes to override his veto of $116 million in education funds, an increase in taxes is inevitable.

Walker took to the voters his fight to have the vetoes sustained during a five-minute television address telecast throughout the state.

The governor outlined what has become the familiar message that he has increased state funding of education more than $500 million in the past three years and that schools will get $100 million more this year than last even if the vetoes are sustained.

He noted the financial picture in the state is not any better now than it was five months ago when he called for a 6 per cent across-the-board state spending cut. He noted unemployment has increased to more than 10 per cent in Illinois.

HE ALSO NOTED the state has increased its share of education funding from 37 per cent to 48 per cent in the past few years.

Despite the increased funding, Walker said some people are still demanding more.

"I believe with all my heart that the people of this state are spending enough for education and we should not ask the taxpayers to pay more,

especially when it means a tax increase."

Walker said the issue is not favoring increased aid to education, but if the Illinois General Assembly should be allowed to overspend and force a tax hike.

The governor also questioned if the increased state spending has brought about an increase in the quality of education.

"DOES ANYBODY really believe the quality of education has increased as much as the burden on the taxpayers; does anybody really believe that school administrators cannot eliminate waste and put those dollars into the classroom," Walker said.

"If you are against higher taxes, then say no to the override," Walker added.

The speech was part of a stepped up media blitz by Walker. Besides Thursday's speech, which was carried by WMAQ-TV, WLS-TV, WGN-TV and a number of Downstate stations, Walker appeared on several radio talk shows.

The governor made no mention of the compromise school funding proposal suggested Wednesday by a group of eight state senators. They have called for $30 million in funds for schools and a change in the school aid funding formula.

The lawmakers had asked Walker to call a special session of the legislature next week to consider the proposal. The governor has indicated he will take the request under advisement.

Feminists urge woman for top court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House said Thursday President Ford will try to nominate the "best qualified person" to succeed Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas — and feminists, with an ally in Betty Ford, urged him to make that person a woman.

At least one woman — Carla Hills, the secretary of housing and urban development — seemed likely to be among the top candidates. And the names of at least half a dozen others cropped up in Washington speculation over who might become the first female Supreme Court justice.

The First Lady told reporters she had a chat with the President and informed him of her wish that he select a female successor to Douglas, who retired suddenly Wednesday for reasons of health. Asked Ford's reaction, she smiled and said, "We'll see."

"There are so many woman judges who fill the bill," she said, and one of them could be "the best person for the job."

Ford, however, remained strictly noncommittal on the subject of potential nominees.

Other top possibilities appeared to be assistant Senate Republican leader

Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, Judge Arlin Adams of the U.S. 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia — both recommended along with Hills by Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott — and Attorney General Edward Levi.

But the retirement of Douglas for reasons of health Wednesday put Ford in the tricky political position of finding a nominee acceptable to both liberal and conservative politicians — or gamble with one side or the other. Either bloc could try to obstruct the nomination in the Senate and plunge

YMCA fund drive aimed at local businesses

Twinbrook YMCA's fund-raising effort aimed at businessmen and professionals will begin with a noon luncheon Wednesday at the Lancer Steak House restaurant, 50 E. Algonquin Rd. The total Family Building Campaign goal is $380,000 and will be used to construct a YMCA Family Center on Wise Road property in Schaumburg owned by the YMCA, said Larry Romito, section chairman.

"The campaign staff is headed by recognized business leaders, whose concern for the community well-being through the spirit of the YMCA is gratifying. The enthusiasm being generated ensures us that the $280,000 goal will be met," Romito said.

"Each of our campaigners has made a significant financial pledge to the campaign. They are business oriented and recognize a good investment. We are certain that the general business community will also recognize that investment opportunity," Romito said.

Dist. 15 wrapup

Builder donations vowed at Oaksbury

Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 will receive $3,900 in developer donations from The Richards Group of Illinois if the proposed Oaksbury subdivision is approved by Rolling Meadows.

In a letter from Clifford Broke, director of operations for the Richards Group, Dist. 15 received a promise of $100 for each of the proposed 39 single-family homes, payable at the time building permits are issued. The three- and four-bedroom homes will be built on 2-acre east of Plum Grove Road on Oaksbury Lane north of the Dawngate subdivision.

Deputy Supt. Joseph Kizka said the Oaksbury development could provide Dist. 15 with 45 additional students. At present, those students would attend Willow Bend School, 4700 Barker Ave., Rolling Meadows, or Plum Grove Junior High School, 26 W. Old Plum Grove Rd., Palatine.

Land purchase approved

Board members in Dist. 15 this week approved the purchase of 2.3 acres directly behind the administration center for $37,750.

The land is being bought from the Church of the Nazarene so that the administration building, 505 S. Quentin Rd., can be expanded if the need arises, district officials said.

Rand stoplight backed

Dist. 15 board members have voted to lend their support to a homeowners group's request for a stoplight at Rand and Long Grove roads.

Sharon Wheat, president of the Pinehurst Manor Homeowners' Assn. north of Dundee Road and east of Rand Road, wrote board members asking for their support. She said that traffic surveys showed a need for a signal at the intersection, but the corner had been put on a waiting list by state officials.

Supt. Frank Whiteley pointed out 25 Dist. 15 bus routes go in and out of Pinehurst Manor and have trouble with the Rand and Long Grove intersection. He agreed to write to the Illinois Dept. of Transportation in support of speedy installation of a traffic signal at that intersection.

Safety work at 2 schools

Basic construction work is finished at Plum Grove and Sandburg junior high schools which should bring those schools into compliance with the Illinois Life Safety Code for schools.

The Life Safety Code sets minimum standards for health and safety in public schools.

District officials; the project's contractor, Pritscher & Erbach; Arlington Heights; and the architects, Del Bianco, Schwartz & Donatoni, Chicago, are scheduled to go over building checklists Monday to review the work.

Sandburg Junior High School will have one life safety-related project completed over Christmas vacation, however, Dist. 15 board members this week approved $11,177 for new gas burners to be installed in the school heating system. During life safety work, workmen discovered that old gas burners should be replaced rather than repaired.

The board's building and grounds committee will now consider life safety needs at Jordan and Addams schools. Both schools are scheduled to comply with the code by July 1, 1976. Board member Leland Gibbs, chairman of the building and grounds committee, said the work can be done this summer.

Districtwide library tax vote urged

by LUISA GINETTI

A referendum to levy a districtwide tax to pay off the bond debt on the new $1.3 million Palatine Public Library has been proposed by the library board.

The library board Wednesday approved a resolution asking Village Atty. Bradley Glass to prepare a draft of a tax levy ordinance and "referendum question" for approval by the library board. The library board has also taken preliminary steps to deed the old library at 140 N. Brockway St. to the village so it can sell the building and use the proceeds to abate approximately one year of the bond debt levy.

Glass was asked to prepare the draft because he, unlike Library Atty. R. Marlin Smith, believes the bond debt can be spread among all district residents. The bond debt now is being borne solely by village residents.

VILLAGE RESIDENTS pay a special tax of 8 cents per $100 assessed valuation to pay off the bond debt for the new $1.3 million library at 600 N. Benton St. Residents also pay a 23 cents per $100 assessed valuation library tax.

Residents of unincorporated Palatine Township, who were recently annexed into the library district, pay only the 23 cents tax. Village residents have criticized the tax burden as being inequitable.

If the library board approves the referendum draft, library trustees have called for the village to pay the cost of conducting the referendum. The library board also has proposed that if a referendum is approved, the village must agree to defend the library board against possible lawsuits from non-village district residents who may object to paying the tax.

The proposed resolution will be sent to the village board for consideration.

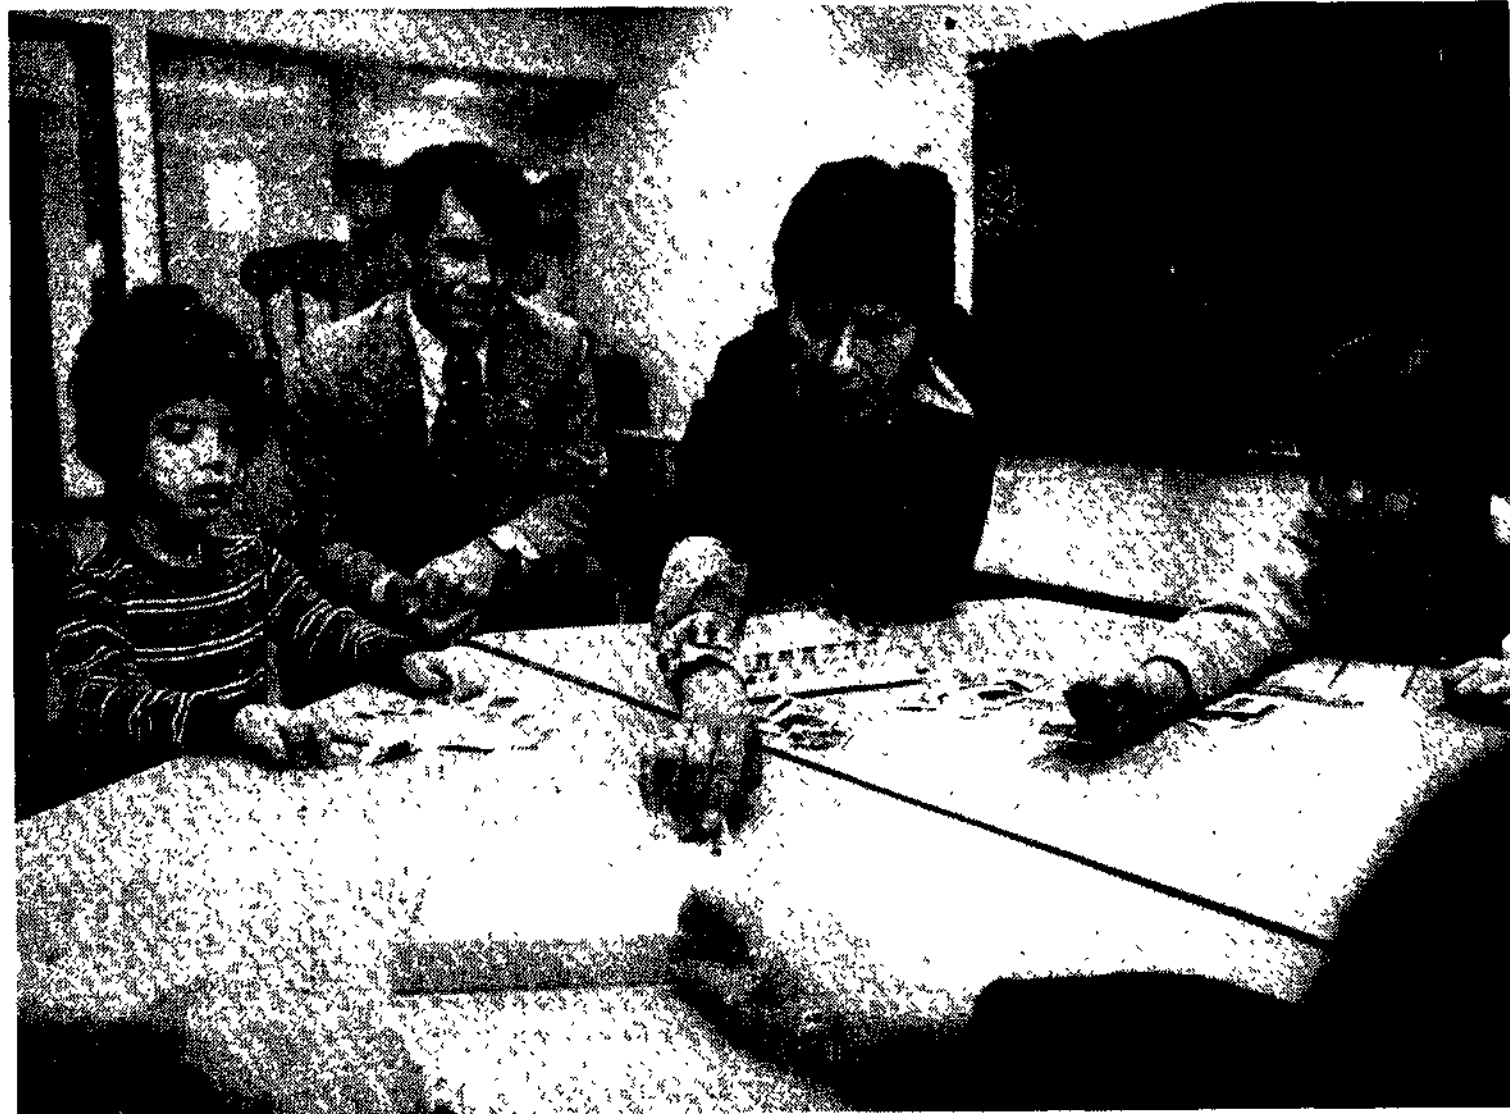

Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones was unavailable for comment on the matter Thursday.

THE RESOLUTION substantially agrees with a proposal suggested by Glass in September. The village attorney said the library board can levy a tax to pay the bond and turn over the money it collects to the village. The village would in turn abate the 8 cent tax on residents so they would not be doubly taxed for the bond issue.

Smith has disagreed with this contention because he believes state statutes prohibit the transfer of tax monies between governmental agencies, he said.

Trustee Bryan P. Coughlin, who has advocated spreading the tax burden to non-village residents, praised the library board's decision. "The board has come a long way toward approving a referendum which we felt should have been held with the expansion referendum," he said.

Coughlin said he did not agree that the village should bear the entire cost

Heatherlea annex plan end asked

A resident opposed to the annexation of the unincorporated Heatherlea subdivision to the Village of Palatine has called on trustees to reject pro-annexation petitions and end the matter.

Ray Tobias, who is among several residents of the subdivision opposed to the annexation, said the lengthy delay in filing petitions with the village should be cause to drop the matter. Pro-annexation forces approached the village in September with the proposal and said they would have petitions filed with the village within 10 weeks.

As of Wednesday, however, not all the annexation petitions had been filed with the village. A spokesman for the annexation forces said the remaining petitions with names of residents in favor of the move will be given to the village soon.

FIFTY-ONE per cent of the registered voters and property owners in the subdivision must sign the annexation petition in order for the village to consider the matter. The village board must accept the petitions and file them with the county clerk before the

Tax payments less than estimated

The first-year tax payment to pay off the first $6 million in Harper College $12 million referendum bonds will cost homeowners $3.30 per $10,000 assessed valuation next year, slightly less than anticipated by college officials.

As adopted, payments on the 12-year bond retirement schedule begin next spring for taxpayers, said William Mann, vice president for administrative services.

Prior to the Sept. 27 referendum, college officials estimated that the same homeowner would pay $4.42 the first year to retire the bond issue on a 20-year retirement schedule.

Mann said the total Harper tax bill in spring, 1976, will "be about $20 on a home assessed at $10,000." He said the college's original tax rate was about $22 on that same home.

THE 12-YEAR retirement schedule was suggested by bond consultant Paul D. Speer and Associates to take advantage of the best interest rates available. Mann told the board that interest on a 20-year retirement schedule would "be so high at the beginning of payments that it would, in fact, be a penalty to existing taxpayers."

The $6 million in bonds should be sold and delivered by Dec. 29 for use in building a $3.75 million physical education facility.

Another $2.1 million will be used to purchase the 117-acre site for Harper's second campus at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads in Arlington Heights.

Speer and Associates said the property can be paid for Dec. 30. The remaining $6 million of the bond issue probably will be sold in two, $3-million portions. It is anticipated the first $3 million portion will be sold in 1978.

Study of village's downtown OKd

Palatine officials have agreed to participate in a $21,000 study of downtown Palatine and downtown Des Plaines aimed at pinpointing the causes for the decline of the business districts.

Palatine's share of the study is $3,500, Des Plaines is paying $2,500 and providing office space and the remainder of the study is being funded under a federal grant administered by the Illinois Dept. of Local Government Affairs.

David Othred, Houston, will conduct the study and attempt to determine why shoppers use the downtown business district and what additional types of stores and services residents would like downtown.

Walker takes case to people

'Override means tax increase'

by STEVE BROWN

Gov. Daniel Walker warned again Thursday that if the state Senate votes to override his veto of $116 million in education funds, an increase in taxes is inevitable.

Walker took to the voters his fight to have the vetoes sustained during a five-minute television address telecast throughout the state.

The governor outlined what has become the familiar message that he has increased state funding of education more than $500 million in the past three years and that schools will get $100 million more this year than last even if the vetoes are sustained.

He noted the financial picture in the state is not any better now than it was five months ago when he called for a 6 per cent across-the-board state spending cut. He noted unemployment has increased to more than 10 per cent in Illinois.

HE ALSO NOTED the state has increased its share of education funding from 37 per cent to 48 per cent in the past few years.

Despite the increased funding, Walker said some people are still demanding more.

"I believe with all my heart that the people of this state are spending enough for education and we should not ask the taxpayers to pay more,

especially when it means a tax increase."

Walker said the issue is not favoring increased aid to education, but if the Illinois General Assembly should be allowed to overspend and force a tax hike.

The governor also questioned if the increased state spending has brought about an increase in the quality of education.

"DOES ANYBODY really believe the quality of education has increased as much as the burden on the taxpayers; does anybody really believe that school administrators cannot eliminate waste and put those dollars into the classroom," Walker said.

"If you are against higher taxes, then say no to the override," Walker added.

The speech was part of a stepped up media blitz by Walker. Besides Thursday's speech, which was carried by WMAQ-TV, WLS-TV, WGN-TV and a number of Downstate stations, Walker appeared on several radio talk shows.

The governor made no mention of the compromise school funding proposal suggested Wednesday by a group of eight state senators. They have called for $30 million in funds for schools and a change in the school aid funding formula.

The lawmakers had asked Walker to call a special session of the legislature next week to consider the proposal. The governor has indicated he will take the request under advisement.

Feminists urge woman for top court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House said Thursday President Ford will try to nominate the "best qualified person" to succeed Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas — and feminists, with an ally in Betty Ford, urged him to make that person a woman.

At least one woman — Carla Hills, the secretary of housing and urban development — seemed likely to be among the top candidates. And the names of at least half a dozen others cropped up in Washington speculation over who might become the first female Supreme Court justice.

The First Lady told reporters she had a chat with the President and informed him of her wish that he select a female successor to Douglas, who retired suddenly Wednesday for reasons of health. Asked Ford's reaction, she smiled and said, "We'll see."

"There are so many woman judges who fill the bill," she said, and one of them could be "the best person for the job."

Ford, however, remained strictly noncommittal on the subject of potential nominees.

Other top possibilities appeared to be assistant Senate Republican leader

Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, Judge Arlin Adams of the U.S. 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia — both recommended along with Hills by Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott — and Attorney General Edward Levi.

But the retirement of Douglas for reasons of health Wednesday put Ford in the tricky political position of finding a nominee acceptable to both liberal and conservative politicians — or gamble with one side or the other. Either bloc could try to obstruct the nomination in the Senate and plunge

Dist. 63 strike into third day

A teachers' strike in East Maine Dist. 63 was expected to enter its third day today despite continuing contract talks late Thursday.

Schools remained open in the district the first two days of the strike, although 88 per cent of the teachers were on picket lines.

Schools will remain open throughout the strike, district officials said.

Both sides say the strike could last through the weekend. Teachers plan to picket again today with little hope that a settlement would be reached Thursday night.

BOARD PRES. Arlene Nidetz said no issues had been resolved by 10:30 p.m. although talks were still in progress.

County School Supt. Richard Martwick was expected to attend negotiations again Thursday to try and mediate the differences. Martwick and John Leigh, a mediator from his office, also caucused with both sides Wednesday, but talks broke off after union negotiators discovered all the board members had left the bargaining table.

Union officials said 304 of the district's 346 teachers were on strike Thursday. They also reported the number of substitutes was down to 179 from 218 the first day.

School Supt. G. Allen Gogo said the union figures were "fairly accurate," although he was not "aware of many substitutes refusing to work."

Student attendance also was down Thursday, according to union figures which showed about 4,300 students in school. Normally about 5,100 of the district's 5,600 students are in class.

TEACHERS picketed outside the schools for the second day distributing leaflets to the parents explaining the teacher's positions.

Substitutes, staffing schools during the strike were taunted by regular teachers yelling "scab" when substitutes left school for the day.

Strike issues at a glance

Issues in East Maine Dist. 63 negotiations:

- Salaries — teachers demand 9 per cent increase; the board is offering 5 per cent. Base pay this year is $8,734.
- Staffing — teachers want seniority basis for staff cuts and transfers while the board says it is administrative prerogative.

- Insurance — Teachers want greater contribution for single and family coverage.
- Personal days — Teachers want three personal days off without approval from administration as currently is the case.

She said more teachers plan to be out today as the strike continues.

Outstanding issues include salaries, fringe benefits and guidelines for staff cuts and transfers.

Old library building proposed

Report on senior center needs sought

Mount Prospect senior citizens have been asked to prepare a report justifying possible conversion of the present village library to a senior citizen center when the new library is completed next year.

Several village board members told a group of senior citizens this week they are not convinced the library building, 14 E. Busse Ave., should be used as a senior citizen center.

Members of the board's public health and safety committee asked the seniors to compile a special report on the matter, outlining the need for the center as well as providing financial information.

"DO THE BEST selling job you can," Trustee Edward B. Rhea Jr. said in calling for the report.

Rhea questioned the proposed center, saying he is not sure the village should be in the business of providing social services.

"There already is great soul-searching going on as to whether the village really belongs in the social service business," Rhea said. "And if we do belong in the social service business, are we right in giving that entire building to one minority group?"

Rhea said numerous arguments probably would justify giving the center to local teenagers, which he said is a larger minority group.

RHEA AND TRUSTEE Theodore J. Wattenberg asked for information about the finances of the center. They said they want to know how much the building is worth, how much it would cost to operate and how much the seniors would contribute.

"If we do create it, we have to fund it. And that is also my question," Rhea said. "Can we afford it?"

Kathleen Sloga, program coordinator for the senior citizens, said the seniors already have raised $1,052 to buy equipment for the center. She said, however, the seniors had never thought of raising enough money to cover operational costs.

"I don't think there is the capacity to raise that kind of money in the senior citizens advisory council," Mrs. Stoga said.

ANTON DVYLIS of the Senior Citizens Advisory Council said the center is needed because present quarters at the Mount Prospect Community Center, 600 S. See-Gwen Ave., are cramped.

"We need more space to carry on the services we are engaged in now," Dvylis said.

Trustee E. F. Richardson said that while he believes the building should be used as a senior citizens center, he wants to review the report from the seniors before making a final decision.

Mrs. Stoga said the report will be a joint effort by the advisory council, senior citizens office and village health department. It is expected to be ready for presentation to the committee in December.

5-year finance forecast of rolls set in Dist. 57

A five-year forecast of finances in Mount Prospect Dist. 57 will be prepared to aid in determining the impact of declining enrollment on the district.

Thursday the board of education's finance committee reviewed last year's forecast and asked the administration to update the figures. The forecast may be used by the board's ad hoc committee on declining enrollment to determine the impact of the shrinking school population on the district's finances.

According to last year's projections the district is expected to have a $178,000 deficit in its operations fund and about a $1.19 million deficit in its education fund by the 1979-80 school year. State aid is expected to decrease as average daily attendance declines.

COMMITTEE chairman David Kluxdal said there has been "no significant change in the financial situation since last year's study," and the trend is expected to continue.

The forecast is pegged on several assumptions, including: all six elementary schools will be kept in operation, and there will be no changes in attendance boundaries; the assessed valuation of property in the district will increase by about $1 million per year except when property is reassessed in a quadrennial year, and salaries of employees will increase about 7 per cent per year.

Kluxdal added words of caution to the report: "These are projections only. Many things could change."

Both the finance and building and sites committees have met to study district finances and facilities. Dwight Hall, assistant supt. for instruction and pupil personnel, said both committees may report to the board when it meets Monday night.

Figures from a census conducted in the district last month show enrollment is expected to drop from 2,893 students this fall to 2,020 by the 1980-81 school year.

Holiday cookbooks available at library

The Mount Prospect Public Library, Busse Highway and Emerson Street, has a number of cookbooks available for holiday meal ideas.

The books include: "The Blessings of Bread" by Adrian Bailey; "The Peasant Kitchen" by Peral Meyers; "From Julia Child's Kitchen" by Julia Child; "Good Recipes for Hard Times" by Louise Newton; "Junior League of Philadelphia's Bicentennial Cookbook," and "The Mushroom Feast" by Jane Grigson.

WITH HOOK in hand, a construction worker prepares to attach it to a steel girder Thursday at the new Mount Prospect Public Library now under construction at the corner of Central and Main streets. Library officials hope to have the new building ready by spring.

Village begins Bicentennial fun Sunday

Mount Prospect's Bicentennial activities will start Sunday with a concert featuring local band and chorus groups presenting 200 years of American music.

The concert will include performances by the Extensioners Chorus, Dist. 57 Elementary Band, Forest View High School Town Criers, Lincoln Junior High School Jazz Band, Prospect High Rhythmettes, the Prospect High Senior Choir and Mellotones and the Prospect High Symphonic Band and Jazz Band.

Fifty Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts will serve as flag bearers and a color guard consisting of Boy Scouts from Troops 154 and 155.

Special guests for the event include Howard Miller of WIND radio and Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley, who will appear as soloist.

The performance will begin at 3 p.m. at the Prospect High School Fieldhouse, 801 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect. Tickets are $1 and are available at the First National Bank, Mount Prospect State Bank, Countryside Bank and Keefer's Pharmacy.

Walker takes case to people

'Override means tax increase'

The local scene

Troop making flag

Girl Scout Junior Troop 742 from Sunset Park School is busy at work making a new American flag as part of their Bicentennial activities.

The girls are also working on several badges, including one in troop dramatics. This includes writing a play, constructing scenery and acting in the play.

In addition, the scouts are collecting old recipes for a special cookbook and making a patchwork quilt of their own design.

Society seeks volunteers

The Mount Prospect Historical Society is looking for members to help with upcoming Bicentennial projects and activities.

The group's main focus at present is the dedication of the society museum, the former St. John Lutheran two-room school house, 1100 S. Linnean Rd. The museum is scheduled to open July 3.

Volunteer help is needed with this project, since display items and an artifact collection program are still in the organizational stages.

Persons interested in joining the historical society should contact Kathleen McMahon, 627 S. Albert St., Mount Prospect. The next society meeting is scheduled for Nov. 25 at the museum.

Head of Scout lunch

Peter M. Tsolinas, Mount Prospect, has been named chairman of the Boy Scouts' annual Construction Industry Lunch-O-Ree program Nov. 24.

The luncheon will begin at 12:15 p.m. at the Arlington Park Hilton, with TV weatherman John Coleman serving as master of ceremonies. During the program, the construction industry "Good Scout" award will be presented to M. Ed Smith, chairman of the board of the Smith-Pipenhagen Co., Arlington Heights.

Bicentennial cups offered

Bicentennial cups, paper plates and napkins are available through the Mount Prospect Extensioners as part of the group's celebration of the nation's 200th birthday.

The Extensioners are offering packages of 12 plates in two sizes at 60 and 80 cents. Cups range in price from 40 to 70 cents, depending on size. Interested persons should contact Elizabeth Meyer, 255-3169.

Speaking limits urged to shorten board meets

In an effort to shorten village board meetings, the Mount Prospect Judiciary Committee has recommended trustees each be limited to three minutes speaking time on matters brought before the board.

"I always felt we were all of us overdoing it," Trustee Theodore J. Wattenberg said. He said, however, he does not agree with several changes in the agenda proposed by Trustee Michael H. Minton.

Minton had called for controversial items to be discussed at only one of the board's two meetings each month. He said routine business should be handled at the other meeting.

Wattenberg said the division of meeting agendas would be ineffective because residents would be unable to remember which subjects would be discussed at each meeting. "It's been tried in other organizations, and it just doesn't work," he said.

MINTON SUGGESTED the time limit be placed on the trustees' comments, saying the length of the meetings discourages residents from attending.

"I think it keeps citizens from coming to these public meetings when they know when they come through those doors they won't get out of there until midnight," he said.

ALTHOUGH WATTENBERG agreed with limiting trustees' comments, he balked at setting a time limit on the residents. "Putting a gag on all of us I agree with. Putting a gag on the citizens is another matter," he said.

In an effort to streamline the meetings, the committee also recommended that controversial items be taken first so that residents don't have to wait through the entire meeting.

"I would like to see the agenda germyandered so controversial matters are front," Minton said. The committee, however, agreed this could be done through a waiver of the rules at the board meetings.

The committee also urged internal business, such as the mayor's report and the village manager's report, to be put at the end of the meeting agenda. Committee members said they plan to ask that committee reports be summarized instead of read verbatim.

WATTENBERG SAID he is also interested in getting rid of the sergeant-at-arms because the policeman is not needed. Although he made the suggestion several weeks ago, Wattenberg said he has not made a formal motion "because I had hoped he would just fade away."

Minton agreed that the sergeant-at-arms is not needed but disagreed with Wattenberg's proposal to end the village attorney's presence at board meetings. He said the attorney is needed to help with the phrasing of motions and other matters.

Both committee members also agreed that board meetings be moved from the building at 112 E. Northwest Hwy. to either the new village hall or new library. Minton said he wants the board room to be "as open and friendly as possible."

500-car garage likely

Panel mulls plans for downtown area

A recommendation on a plan that could dramatically reshape downtown Arlington Heights over the next 20 years is expected within 60 days.

Cornerstone of the plan apparently will be a proposal to build a downtown parking garage for 300 to 500 cars.

Trustee August Bettman, chairman of a downtown revitalization committee, said Thursday night that "the committee is determined that something is going to happen downtown." His remarks followed a presentation by Village Planner Joe Kesler of 10 different concepts for a new downtown.

PARTIAL RETURNS from a survey of 96 businesses located south of the railroad tracks indicate support for a garage, Earl Johnson, director of the chamber of commerce said. "People really feel there is a need for a parking facility in downtown Arlington Heights. And they feel that the village-owned property on Vail Avenue between Campbell and Sigwalt streets would be an ideal spot."

Kesler's presentation emphasized ways to reduce the barrier effect of Northwest Highway and the railroad tracks that now divide downtown into northern and southern districts. An ideal planning solution would be to turn Northwest Highway into a tunnel from Highland Avenue to Pine Street, using all of the ground above as a pedestrian mall, he said.

"This would be elegant, but I'm afraid a hopelessly expensive solution." As an alternative, Kesler proposed a series of highway bypass plans that would virtually eliminate traffic on Northwest Highway downtown.

Kesler's concept is to redirect Northwest Highway traffic around the downtown using a series of distributor streets that would form a ring around the business district. Downtown streets such as Campbell, Miner, Duntun and Davis would be converted to pedestrian malls. Parking garages would be located at the perimeter.

THE PLAN IS more costly and more difficult to implement than continuing the existing layout, but ultimately it will lead to a more successful redevelopment program, Kesler said.

As evidence that the downtown must be rebuilt, Kesler cited statistics that show that the total assessed valuation of downtown property is only $4.1 million, or only 1.3 per cent of the village total. In other suburbs similar in size to Arlington Heights, downtown valuation is 10 per cent or more of the total, he said.

The low assessed valuation downtown means higher taxes for the residential property owner, said Village Pres. James T. Ryan.

"Arlington Heights is too large a community to have a downtown that contributes only $4 million. To allow this to continue is putting the burden ever more on the single-family homeowner."

In the next 60 days, Bettman's committee will try to select a plan for downtown and a proposal for financing the garage that it can recommend to the village board.

WORKIN' ON THE railroad at Ridge and Walnut avenues, men improve the track bed. Other work crews are expected at the site soon to construct a grade crossing between Ridge and Walnut.

New York woes prompt call for new panel here

by JOE SWICKARD

The spectre of bankruptcy haunting New York City has prompted former Village Pres. Ralph Clarbour to call for a special "one-shot committee" to study the long-term obligations of Arlington Heights.

Clarbour said the committee should be established "to study the long-term commitments of Arlington Heights and the ability tax-wise to meet those commitments in the future."

The proposed special committee would be made up of trustees, business leaders and "just plain ordinary interested citizens," Clarbour said. He said the committee should have eight members plus a chairman.

ALTHOUGH his idea received a cool reception when he mentioned it to the village board last month, he said he thought it was a necessary step to be taken by the village government now.

"It didn't click before, but I'm going to press it further," he said. "I may have to remind them of it."

The committee, as Clarbour sees it, would be charged with compiling a report outlining the financial obligations of the village. The report could be used as background or source material for the village board, he said.

"It could be a picture of where we are currently. This constantly changes. And with the recent changes on the village board, that report could be good background for them," Clarbour said.

THE VILLAGE'S reliance on tax revenues rather than bonds for services has placed it in good financial order so far, the former village president said.

"We fortunately, are not heavily involved in the bonding market for our services. We have kept far more current," Clarbour said.

He said New York city, unlike Arlington Heights, entered a potentially dangerous financial situation when it started selling bonds to meet operating and service expenses. By concentrating bond sales for improvement projects, such as sewers or flood control, he village would not be in desperate straits should New York default on its municipal bonds, he said.

Despite the unpopularity of the village's 5 per cent tax on utility bills, Clarbour said it has been a boon to the village.

"The sales tax and the utility tax, even though some might want to get rid of them, are a great part of the reason for being as financially sound

At-home car tune-up service illegal here

An at-home automobile tune-up service advertised by Sears, Roebuck and Co. is illegal in the Village of Arlington Heights, Jack M. Siegel, village attorney, has told the giant retailer.

According to Siegel, the at-home tune-ups violate the village's zoning ordinance which prohibit automobile repair work in a residential district.

"It is the policy of the Village of Arlington Heights to strictly enforce the provisions of its zoning ordinance," Siegel said in an Oct. 10 letter to Sears' legal department.

The village will "enforce the zoning ordinance by the appropriate legal means," he said.

Sears has been advertising the new tune-up program in area newspapers.

A spokesman for Sears said Wednesday that the at-home tune up service will not be available in Arlington Heights as a result of the letter. The company had no intention of violating any local ordinance when it set up the program, the spokesman said.

Walker takes case to people

'Override means tax increase'

by STEVE BROWN

Gov. Daniel Walker warned again Thursday that if the state Senate votes to override his veto of $116 million in education funds, an increase in taxes is inevitable.

Walker took to the voters his fight to have the vetoes sustained during a five-minute television address telecast throughout the state.

The governor outlined what has become the familiar message that he has increased state funding of education more than $500 million in the past three years and that schools will get $100 million more this year than last even if the vetoes are sustained.

He noted the financial picture in the state is not any better now than it was five months ago when he called for a 6 per cent across-the-board state spending cut. He noted unemployment has increased to more than 10 per cent in Illinois.

HE ALSO NOTED the state has increased its share of education funding from 37 per cent to 48 per cent in the past few years.

Despite the increased funding, Walker said some people are still demanding more.

"I believe with all my heart that the people of this state are spending enough for education and we should not ask the taxpayers to pay more,

especially when it means a tax increase."

Walker said the issue is not favoring increased aid to education, but if the Illinois General Assembly should be allowed to overspend and force a tax hike.

The governor also questioned if the increased state spending has brought about an increase in the quality of education.

"DOES ANYBODY really believe the quality of education has increased as much as the burden on the taxpayers; does anybody really believe that school administrators cannot eliminate waste and put those dollars into the classroom," Walker said.

"If you are against higher taxes, then say no to the override," Walker added.

The speech was part of a stepped up media blitz by Walker. Besides Thursday's speech, which was carried by WMAQ-TV, WLS-TV, WGN-TV and a number of Downstate stations, Walker appeared on several radio talk shows.

The governor made no mention of the compromise school funding proposal suggested Wednesday by a group of eight state senators. They have called for $30 million in funds for schools and a change in the school aid funding formula.

The lawmakers had asked Walker to call a special session of the legislature next week to consider the proposal. The governor has indicated he will take the request under advisement.

Feminists urge woman for top court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House said Thursday President Ford will try to nominate the "best qualified person" to succeed Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas — and feminists, with an ally in Betty Ford, urged him to make that person a woman.

At least one woman — Carla Hills, the secretary of housing and urban development — seemed likely to be among the top candidates. And the names of at least half a dozen others cropped up in Washington speculation over who might become the first female Supreme Court justice.

The First Lady told reporters she had a chat with the President and informed him of her wish that he select a female successor to Douglas, who retired suddenly Wednesday for reasons of health. Asked Ford's reaction, she smiled and said, "We'll see."

"There are so many woman judges who fill the bill," she said, and one of them could be "the best person for the job."

Ford, however, remained strictly noncommittal on the subject of potential nominees.

Other top possibilities appeared to be assistant Senate Republican leader

Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, Judge Arlin Adams of the U.S. 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia — both recommended along with Hills by Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott — and Attorney General Edward Levi.

But the retirement of Douglas for reasons of health Wednesday put Ford in the tricky political position of finding a nominee acceptable to both liberal and conservative politicians — or gamble with one side or the other. Either bloc could try to obstruct the nomination in the Senate and plunge

An estimated 220 skaters from seven states will compete this week in the Upper Great Lakes regional championships, skating competition at the Randhurst Twin Ice Arena, Mount Prospect.

On hand will be David Santee, who just graduated from Maine South High School. Santee is shooting for his fourth regional senior title.

Winners will go on to the Midwestern championships in December in Denver, Colo. If Santee passes the test in Mount Prospect, he will aim for his third crown at the Midwestern contest.

Then there are the national finals in Colorado Springs in January. The trials will determine who will represent the United States in the upcoming Winter Olympics.

Social services 'super agency' proposed here

An Arlington Heights "super agency" is being proposed to deal with social services.

A recommendation to combine three local agencies — the youth, senior citizens and housing commissions — will be made by a special committee chaired by Ralph Clarbour, former village president.

Under the recommendation, the existing commissions would become subcommittees of the new body.

Committee member Michael Silverman called for the consolidation. He said it would provide a unifying force for the social services being offered by the village, rather than the "advocacy role," often taken by the committees as they are now structured.

THE CONSOLIDATION proposal was the only change recommended by the committee in its latest round of meetings. A suggestion that a director of social services be hired by the village to coordinate activities was not adopted.

Clarbour said the committee found the existing administrative procedures adequate.

Presently, special services are assigned to various village governmental departments. The health department has been dealing with problems and needs of the senior citizens, while the police department is involved with the agencies aimed at the young village residents, Clarbour said.

The village also provides referral to other governmental bodies and the services they offer.

CLARBOUR SAID an example of this would be the village's directing a senior citizen to Wheeling Township for its bus service.

The committee is still grappling with evaluation criteria for social service agencies the village is funding or is considering supporting.

Clarbour said that while the evaluation procedures have not been set by the committee, one "logical" method would be to determine what the needs are, what other agencies are doing in the area and finally what remains to be done at the village level.

His committee earlier recommended that the village curtail many of its social services. Other governmental bodies, the committee found, are performing the working and village participation is often duplication of time, effort and money.

A JOINT MEETING between the committee and the village trustees tentatively scheduled for next week has been canceled.

Clarbour said he wanted to hold the meeting by the end of the year, "but that might be optimistic."

He said he favored a special meeting of the board, instead of appearing as part of a regular session. A special meeting, he said, would provide more time for trustees to ask questions and to get background material as well as giving all committee members a forum for their views.

Car dealer tells plans for new showroom here

Sullivan Pontiac has presented plans to Arlington Heights village officials for a new showroom at Ridge Avenue and Dundee Road.

Appearing before the plan and subdivision subcommittee of the village plan commission, William Sullivan said the present showroom on Northwest Highway is too small for an auto dealership of Sullivan's volume. He said with the new facility he could expect to sell 900 new cars annually, an increase of 200.

The new operation would house showrooms, car lots and shops. It would cover about 24,000 square feet on one floor.

The members of the subcommittee said the location was good for an automobile dealer and the village wanted to encourage such developments in that area.

Sullivan said he was working against a July deadline to vacate the present showroom. He said approval must be granted by the village in December in time to finish the new showroom by July.

The matter will go before village department heads for comments before being considered by the plan commission. After the commission the question will be taken by the village board who has the final say on it.

Booster club organized by church parish

A group of parents and parishioners has started a boosters club at Our Lady of the Wayside School, 432 S. Mitchell, Arlington Heights.

The booster club's goal is to improve and expand activities at the school. Some of the expanded program for boys and girls include basketball, baseball, volleyball, boys' wrestling, girls' gymnastics, cheerleading and a school newspaper.

The Rev. James McIlhorne is moderator of the booster club and is in charge of the camera club, also a part of the booster organization.

Fund-raising plans are under way to purchase side basketball backboards, a balance beam for gymnastics, repair and replacement of bleachers in the junior high and uniforms for school teams.

Officers of the boosters club include Bill Frankel, president; Peggy Curnyn, vice president; Ralph Kappelman, treasurer, and Jan Rothers, secretary. The board of directors includes Pete Galdond, Jim Collins, Jim Sweeney, Janet Wills, Ray Arena, George Miller, Joe Foreman, Dick Kaiser and Barb Horrigan in addition to the officers.

Burglars steal cash from store safe

Burglars stole an undetermined amount of cash from a safe at Sunrise Health and Organic Food Center, 811 Rand Rd., Arlington Heights, police said Thursday.

Burglars removed a hinge from the safe and then pried it open, police said. Entry to the building was gained sometime between 8:30 p.m. Wednesday and 7:45 a.m. Thursday by cutting a door bolt, police said.

Police are also investigating a burglary in which about $950 worth of appliances were reported stolen Wednesday from the Stewart Stolen apartment, 2315 E. Olive St. Stolen was a color television set and stereo equipment, police were told. No signs of forced entry were found, police said.
